Quake in Philippines Kills 1,744 Dead

Cotabato City after the earthquake struck

Special to The New York Times
Wednesday, Aug. 14. It sent shock waves through the island of Mindanao, the largest island in the Philippines. The earthquake killed 1,744 people and left 2,094 injured. A 18-foot tidal wave struck the island, sweeping away clusters of bamboo huts along the coast. "Our farm on the coast was devastated," said Esther Sinsuat, 39. She had received a telephone report from a daughter in Cotabato City. "Fortunately our hired hands were able to run to a nearby hill and were saved." Mrs. Sinsuat, wife of a date, local Moro tribal chief, was observing a birthday and she

The first sale of oil leases off the Atlantic coast was held last night in the Statler Hilton Hotel in Manhattan after a tense all-day wait before Associate Justice Thurgood Marshall of the United States Supreme Court decided to allow the bidding.

The high bids totaled some $1.14 billion, about double the $600 million the Government had anticipated. Although the sale took place, drilling cannot commence until a full review next month by a United States Court of Appeals on environmental issues under dispute.

Thrifty L.B.J. and Tearful Brezhnev Are Described in Memoir by Brandt

BONN, Aug. 17 (Reuters)— Candid portraits of famous world political leaders are given by former Chancellor Willy Brandt in his memoirs being published here.

Mr. Brandt pictures the late President Lyndon B. Johnson as an inveterate collector who had shops opened in the dead of night to satisfy his whims. He says President Charles de Gaulle tended to treat those who questioned him as junior officers and that the Soviet Communist Party leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev, was subject to emotional outbursts when discussing World War II and "was not ashamed of suddenly breaking into tears."

Former Prime Minister Sir Harold Wilson of Britain surprised Mr. Brandt by "conducting foreign policy as if Britain was still a world power."

'Encounters and Insights'

Mr. Brandt's impressions are contained in a book entitled "Begegnungen und Einsichten" ("Encounters and Insights"), published by the Hamburg concern of Hoffmann & Campe. The 647-page memoir covers the period from 1960 to 1975. Mr. Brandt served during that time as Mayor of West Berlin, chairman of the Social Democratic Party, Foreign Minister and Chancellor. He plans to write a second volume.

Mr. Brandt portrays himself in the first volume as a sensitive, highly principled politician. In it, he gives new details of the Arab guerrilla attack on the Israeli team at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

and also gives his reaction to the spy drama that caused his resignation in May 1974. Following are some of his impressions of world leaders: President Johnson: "Visiting West Berlin in 1961, then as Vice President, Mr. Johnson fancied shoes he had seen Mr. Brandt wearing. A West Berlin shoe shop was reopened long after closing time to enable him to get a similar pair. The following day, a Sunday, two more shops were opened specially because Mr. Johnson wanted to buy electric razors and a porcelain dinner service as gifts for friends. According to the book, Mr. Johnson also ordered a large number of porcelain ashtrays and summoned up this piece of bargain-hunting with the phrase, 'They look like a dollar and only cost me 25 cents.'"

President de Gaulle: Mr. Brandt describes a talk he had, as West Berlin Mayor, with President de Gaulle in 1959. The General rattled off a series of questions "in the manner of a field marshal getting information from a section commander."

Mr. Brezhnev: At times he could be "impulsive and irritable," Mr. Brandt wrote. The Kennedy: Mr. Brandt expresses his longstanding admiration for President Kennedy, but he chronicles one event that he said made him "regard the family's political expansion with disgust." After he had proposed a toast in the West Berlin guest house to "the President, Government and people of the United States," the late Robert F. Kennedy, who held the post of Attorney General, responded by saying: "That's the three of us—the President is my brother, I am the Government and you [pointing to Senator Edward M. Kennedy] are the people."

Dr. Adenauer: Mr. Brandt tells of the fears of Konrad Adenauer, first Chancellor of modern West Germany, of the effects of Britain's admission to the Common Market. He quotes Dr. Adenauer as saying: "Above all it is France and us and that works well. If the English come in, it is not certain things will go well. When three are together, you have always to reckon two will gang up on the third. I fear we will be the third."

Mr. Nixon and Dr. Kissinger: Mr. Brandt says he never got the impression that President Richard M. Nixon was the puppet of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in foreign policy matters, but he adds that the disgraced former President seldom seemed at ease.

In his remarks on his sensational fall from the post of Chancellor following the arrest of one of his closest advisers, Gunter Guillaume, as a Communist spy, he says that when he first heard of Mr. Guillaume's defection he did not immediately consider resigning but later changed his mind. He said:

"Certainly, I accepted advice which in retrospect I should not have done. But I was right in accepting the political responsibility. I could never have worked in peace again."

Leonid I. Brezhnev, Soviet leader, in the Crimea in 1971, when Chancellor of West Germany, went to the Soviet Union on state visit.

Leaves Prison on $690,000 Bail open at 4:30 P.M. to permit Mr. Tanaka's shiny black limousine to ease its way out through waiting crowds of spectators. Some of them could be seen dabbling at tears at the sight of the disgraced politician, a development of what many former farm boys who rose to the summit of Japan's political leadership 49 months ago, promised an era of new social directions for this nation.

Today Mr. Tanaka, the first

Japanese to be indicted for a crime committed while serving as Prime Minister, stared solemnly straight ahead in the crowded back seat of his car as it left the prison in the latest development of what many here now call "Japan's Water-gate."

The vehicle whisked the former head of government past thousands of spectators to his luxurious housing, compound seven miles away in the Mejiro-dai section of northwest Tokyo where squads of staff members quietly greeted him with many low bows.

Mr. Tanaka, who has resigned the leadership of his powerful political factions and withdrawn his membership in the governing Liberal Democratic Party, is no longer referred to here as Tanaka-san, or Mr. Tanaka. He is spoken of simply as Tanaka, a blunt form that implies no respect.

He is accused of having violated foreign exchange regulations and of having accepted bribe money from Lockheed Aircraft representatives to arrange the purchase of 111 Tristar jet airliners by All Nippon Airways. He faces a possible seven and a half years in prison and a multimillion dollar fine.

Mr. Tanaka was formally charged yesterday after having been arrested on July 27. Tax authorities announced today that they were investigating the possibility of taxing Mr. Tanaka for the Lockheed money, which he contends was a political donation.

After overnight deliberation, Mitsuru Kobayashi, Chief Justice of the Tokyo District Court, granted bail to Mr. Tanaka today. And this afternoon Mr. Tanaka's lawyer, Choei Hara, walked into a downtown Tokyo bank and deposited the full 200 million yen in cash—equivalent to $689,855—in the court's bail account. Four other men charged with offenses in the Lockheed scandal were also released on bail today. They were Toshio Enomoto, 50 years old, Mr. Tanaka's secretary; Hisayori Aoki, 48, accounting chief for All Nippon Airways; and Hiroshi Hiyama, 66, and Toshiharu Okubo, 62, two former executives of the Marubeni Trading Corporation who are accused of having paid the bribe to Mr. Tanaka in 1973 and 1974.

Damage Is Reported Chinese Earthquake

ROSS H. MUNRO

Aug. 18 accounts of Japanese and other earth-foreign technicians working in the cities of Chengtu and western Luchow to the south of the Monday epicenter. They informed people in Peking yesterday that sparse warnings had been issued beforehand. The Japanese technicians, near the provincial capital of Chengtu, had been moved a night out of their dwellings and into tents when the quake struck. They told Japanese diplomats that they felt only weak tremors, but Hsinhua said "strong shocks" were felt in the bordering areas of Kansu Province. Yesterday the Communist Party newspaper Jenmin Jih Pao charged that "enemy stations" had deliberately interfered with emergency radio messages being transmitted from Tangshan during the first hours after the earthquake there three weeks ago.

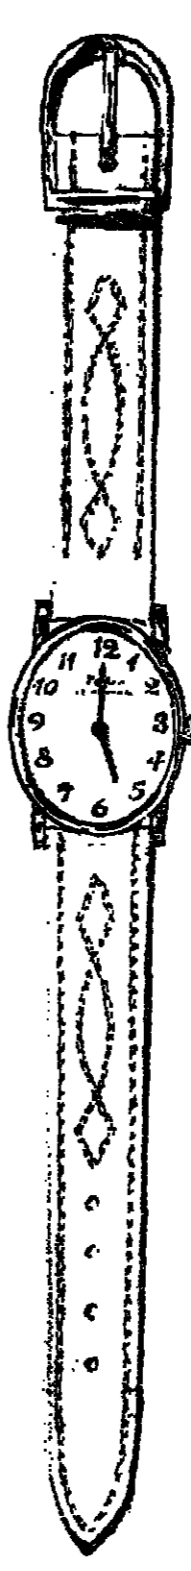

The extraordinary charge of jamming was made in an article that covered the top half of the front page. No country was mentioned. The article told how a 22-year-old army radio operator named Wu Tung-liang salvaged a radio during the earthquake and thereby provided the first link between Tangshan and the outside world. Whenever Mr. Wu touched the control knob the article said, enemy stations would begin interference on the frequency.

"Facing the challenge," the article said, "Wu Tung-liang was full of anger. He put his earphones on as tight as he could and, taking a deep breath, he kept changing the radio frequency to shake off the enemy."

Thieves Again Strike a French Bank Via Sewer

PARIS, Aug. 17 (AP)—Exactly four weeks after what was called the "bank robbery of the century" in Nice, thieves using the same method tunneled into a bank in the heart of Paris and escaped with cash and jewelry from 191 safe-deposit boxes, the police said today.

No official report was given on the amount stolen from the Société Générale branch on the Ile-St.-Louis by the robbers, who dug a tunnel into the vault from the Paris sewer system during the weekend. But there were estimates that the theft could exceed $5 million.

The loss in the burglary of the same bank's branch in Nice last month was estimated at $8 million to $10 million. In estimating the amount stolen in Nice, the police assumed that each safe-deposit box held valuables worth an average of $25,000. A similar calculation would give the Ile-St.-Louis thieves close to $5 million.

Guards and sewermen reported hearing a series of "dull thumps" from the basement of the building during the week-end. The police were called but found nothing unusual. The management of the bank, on an affluent residential island in the Seine River, said the alarm system functioned perfectly but that there had been a "human failing." They did not elaborate.

Open Door Was Noticed

Reporting on the Paris theft, investigators said the gang entered the sewer system through a steel door under the Louis-Philippe Bridge, 300 yards from the bank building. Sewer men noticed yesterday that the steel door had been forced open, but apparently no one linked the

Indian Paper's Independence Imperiled

By HENRY KAMM
Special to The New York Times
CALCUTTA, India — The Statesman, the last of India's English-language national dailies not yet completely dominated by the Government, is under intense Government pressure.

A court hearing scheduled for New Delhi on Aug. 20 may put the presses of the newspaper's New Delhi edition under Government control. The newspaper's corporate headquarters and largest edition are here.

The case is another in a series of Government moves since Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's declaration of a state of emergency last year threatening the Statesman's independence. It involves an order by the Government for the newspaper to show cause why its presses should not be forfeited because they served to print a recently closed monthly.

The monthly, Seminar, which ceased publication last month rather than accept a Government order to submit itself to censorship before publication, had no connection with The Statesman. It was printed on the newspaper's presses on a commercial basis.

Neither The Statesman nor Seminar had had any warning before last month's censorship order. The order has not been violated since no issue of the magazine was printed following it.

Nonetheless, copies of the show-cause order were presented individually to the retired former chief justice of India, S. R. Das, who is chairman of the newspaper's board of directors, and to each board member.

The Statesman will contest the Government order, as it has the previous moves against it. They involved attempts by the Government to gain control of the newspaper through legal moves.

The first was an allegation that The Statesman had misused its newsprint. The second was a charge that the newspaper had wrongfully acquired majority control over a book-publishing concern some years ago. The third was confiscation of the passport of the newspaper's managing director, C. R. Irani, when he returned from a session of the Asian Press Institute in Hong Kong.

In the first two, the newspaper sought in the high court of the state of West Bengal to block the orders, contending that the legal moves were part of a Government design to gain control of the newspaper. The orders were issued and the Government has not moved to have them rescinded. The Statesman believes that the Government is not prepared to fight the cases on the freedom-of-the-press issue.

Statesman Stands Alone
The newspaper's briefs alleged, with names, dates and places, a number of Government attempts to put pressure on The Statesman to fall into line. The contentions involve harassment in systematically delaying publication of the paper through censorship actions, direct demands to change news policy by the Information Minister, V.C. Shukla, and other officials, pressure on stockholders, and Government attempts to influence appointments of news executives.

The other English-language national newspapers, which have been the most influential in the country since the colonial period, are The Times of India, The Hindustan Times, The Indian Express and The Hindu. The Statesman is alone among them in restraining its enthusiasm for Mrs. Gandhi's measures; such enthusiasm has become the uniform standard of the once highly contentious press.

The Statesman is as bound by the rules issued for the Indian press, which prevent criticism of the "emergency" and its sweeping curtailment of civil rights, as are all newspapers. It does not criticize. But its regular readers find that the paper does not go out of its way to praise, as the others do.

Hindu Falls Into Line
Unlike its competitors, moreover, The Statesman does not give front-page prominence to all Government actions, important or not. The Statesman's policy is defined as acceptance of Government rules on what it must not print but reserving for itself the decision of how to present the news it is allowed to publish.

Of the other English-language national newspapers, The Hindu, published in Madras, fell into line quickly. The Times of India was in a difficult situation to resist because the Government, as a result of a pre-emergency court action for financial anomalies, has temporary control over one-third of the newspaper's stock and the high court in the state of Maharashtra, in Bombay, controls another third.

British Aide, Warning on Prices, Finds Drought Situation 'Grave'

Special to The New York Times
LONDON, Aug. 17—Frederick Peart, the Minister of Agriculture, after a two-day tour of English farms affected by drought, said here tonight: "I can't remember ever seeing anything like this. The situation is very grave."
Mr. Peart visited areas in the southwest of England today after having walked the dusty fields of Suffolk in the east yesterday.
Normally at this time the pasture is lush. But today the Agriculture Minister was told by Frank Walters, who farms 430 acres near Exeter: "The land is producing no grass. The situation is serious. One of my neighbors will have used all his water feed stocks by Dec. 1, almost before winter has started." The minister heard similar reports in other districts.
In some areas, in the Midlands and in Dorset in the south, cattle have been getting no grass for weeks from the burned fields. Winter feed is expensive and the farmers are grumbling. They say there will be considerable thinning out of beef and dairy herds.
"If there is a shortage of supplies through lack of rain, it will inevitably affect prices," Mr. Peart warned. "You cannot blame the farmer."
Water Pressure Reduced
Today, London's water supplier, the Thames Water Authority, took the highly unusual step of reducing the pressure of water through the pipes by about 25 percent. A spokesman said this was being done to reduce consumption by about 10 percent. As water from faucets runs more slowly, the authority hopes, Londoners will become more conscious of the shortage. The use of hoses on gardens was banned a couple of weeks ago but the saving has been less than expected. Industrial production in many areas is in peril.
Today as the authority's chairman, Peter Black, urged Londoners to "treat water as if it was the most valuable liquid on the face of the earth," its publicity department gave out pictures of the Staines Reservoir, now cracked and barren with 17 million gallons of water in it instead of the normal 3.5 billion.
This summer's weather has never been equaled—and some formal records have been kept for about 200 years—for average daily hours of sunshine and low rainfall.
Winters Also Dry
But it is not just the present burning summer—with scarcely any rain in the south of England for three months—that has caused the reservoirs and natural cisterns to dry up. The last two winters have been unseasonably dry and mild as well.
Yesterday the Meteorological Office put out its long-range forecast for the next 30 days: Continuing dry and warm.
Scotland and some northern districts of England have escaped the worst of the drought, but rain has been light.
Yesterday, when Mr. Peart inspected farms in Suffolk and Warwickshire, he dug up carrots, sugar beets and potatoes that were badly shriveled or no more than half the size they should have been.
His warning about shortages and price increases led to a rush today to lay in stocks of frozen vegetables to stock stores warned housewives that the next consignments would be more expensive.

GRAIN OFFICERS ACCUSED OF FRAUD

S. Indicts Cook Aides on Shortweighting Charges

Special to The New York Times
NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 17—Four former or present vice presidents of Cook Industries Inc. were charged by a Federal grand jury here today with conspiring to cheat foreign customers for the company's benefit, shortweighting ships loaded at Cook's local grain elevator. A fifth defendant, a former elevator manager who helped carry out the others' orders to withhold a percentage of grain that customers had ordered, was also named in the 33-count indictment, which said the conspiracy lasted from mid-1970 to February 1975. The Memphis-based corporation, described as the world's third largest grain exporter, was convicted on nearly identical charges on May 6 after having entered a plea of no contest. Saying then that Cook had profited from the systematic shortweighting, Judge Alvin B. Rubin of the United States District Court imposed the maximum sentence against the company, a $370,000 fine. The earlier indictment of the company alleged that several Cook executives had taken part in the conspiracy, which involved falsifying records to cover up the thefts, but the indictment did not name the executives. Among the Cook officials named in today's indictment is Phillip H. McCaul, former executive vice president and former member of the Cook board of directors, who is now living in Greenwich, Conn. He is said to be working for another large grain company. The others are Raymond M. Fretz of Memphis, vice president since August 1972, and the only one still employed by Cook; Michael E. Ragen of Memphis, vice president until November 1974; Melvin L. Hibberts of New Orleans, a vice president until May; and Jack A. Coleman, of La. Plage, La., elevator manager until May. In a statement by a Cook spokesman today, Mr. Fretz says he has been cooperating with Federal authorities investigating the grain industry and was shocked by his indictment. "I am innocent of all charges, his statement said. "I am confident I will be completely vindicated at trial." The company has no plans to suspend Mr. Fretz, according to the spokesman, who said the company had no further comment on today's action. In a second indictment returned today, two former lower-level employees of the grain elevator were charged with conspiring to steal six bargeloads of soybeans and wheat from Cook. The alleged theft by Rodney Charles Waguespack, a former barge traffic manager for the elevator, and Billy Hall, who was assistant elevator superintendent, took place from the summer of 1971 to January, 1973. This was the time the executives were engaged in their theft conspiracy, according to the indictment. Mr. Waguespack and Mr. Hall caused grain barges destined for Cook's elevator to be diverted to a small New Orleans grain company, the grand jury charged. Mr. Waguespack received received $379,000 for diverting the barges and falsified records to cover up the thefts, according to the indictment. A third indictment charged Mr. Waguespack with four counts of Federal income tax evasion. Federal authorities here, coordinated by the Office of the United States Attorney, Gerald J. Gallinghouse, have obtained indictments against 67 defendants in the continuing two-year-old inquiry into grain industry corruption. Of these, 66 defendants, including six major grain corporations, have been convicted here. In addition, 13 persons have been indicted in Houston and Baton Rouge, largely as a result of information developed here.

Soviet Astronauts Suffer From a 'Sensory' Problem

MOSCOW, Aug. 17 (UPI)—Two Soviet astronauts began their seventh week in orbit today, passing the halfway mark toward breaking the United States space endurance record, but suffering from a "sensory" psychological problem. Flight control center said that Col. Boris Volynov, 41 years old, and Lieut. Col. Vitaly Zholovoy, 39, "feel well" and were performing scheduled scientific and medico-biological experiments aboard the space laboratory. But the Government newspaper Izvestia reported that they were suffering from "a state of sensory deprivation, a sort of sensory hunger." The newspaper added that the astronauts were "smelling, hearing and feeling temperature fluctuations in a more intense way." They also were asking more and more frequently for news from earth, Izvestia said, and on psychological advice ground control was not only giving them the news but also playing music for them in communications sessions.

Palestinian Guerrillas Fighting for Their Survival in Lebanon

are in complete control of the Bekaa plains, and their forces have advanced to Sofar, 13 miles east of here on the main Beirut-Damascus highway.

In the north, Palestinian camps at the northern approaches to the Moslem port of Tripoli are besieged by Syrian troops, while Tripoli itself is threatened by rightist forces on the east and south.

The Palestinians in southern Lebanon are squeezed between the Syrians and the Israelis. With Syrian troops in the Christian town of Jezzine in the hills overlooking the southern coast, Israeli patrol boats have been intercepting ships carrying supplies to the Moslem ports of Tyre and Sidon.

Total Palestinian fighting strength is now estimated at between 20,000 and 25,000, about the same as it was when the civil war began in the spring of 1975. The Palestinians admit, however, that they have suffered a large number of casualties, and it is estimated that about half of the 25,000 reportedly killed in the civil war have been Palestinians, many of them fighting men.

Although the Palestinians have allies in Lebanese Moslems and Moslems, the Palestinians, who have been under arms for years, constitute the major strength in the alliance. The leftist and Moslem militia groups began to arm and train only in the last two years, and the total fighting strength of the native Lebanese Moslem-leftist forces is believed to have reached only 3,000 out of the total Palestinian-leftist fighting force of 28,000 men.

The Palestinian force, which is mostly Palestinians who were in Lebanon before the outbreak of the civil war, includes about 1,500 Palestine Liberation Army troops, who were stationed in Egypt until late last year when they joined the guerrilla forces here, and several hundred Arab volunteers who reached here from Iraq and Algeria.

Besides the 26,000 Syrian troops who have entered the country, the Palestinians face about 25,000 rightist Christians under arms. The Palestinians have been in Lebanon in substantial numbers since they fled at the time of the founding of Israel in 1948, but originally the main guerrilla bases were in Jordan. The guerrillas moved their bases here in 1970 and 1971 after King Hussein drove them from Jordan. After moving their bases here, the guerrillas became a major factor in Lebanon, often controlling areas of the countryside. But they were dependent on supplies from Syria.

The Syrian intervention has cut off the Palestinians from what was their major source of weapons, supplies and trained men. Before June, the so-called Arafat trail, stretching from Damascus through the guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon, was the lung that provided breath for the Palestinian movement.

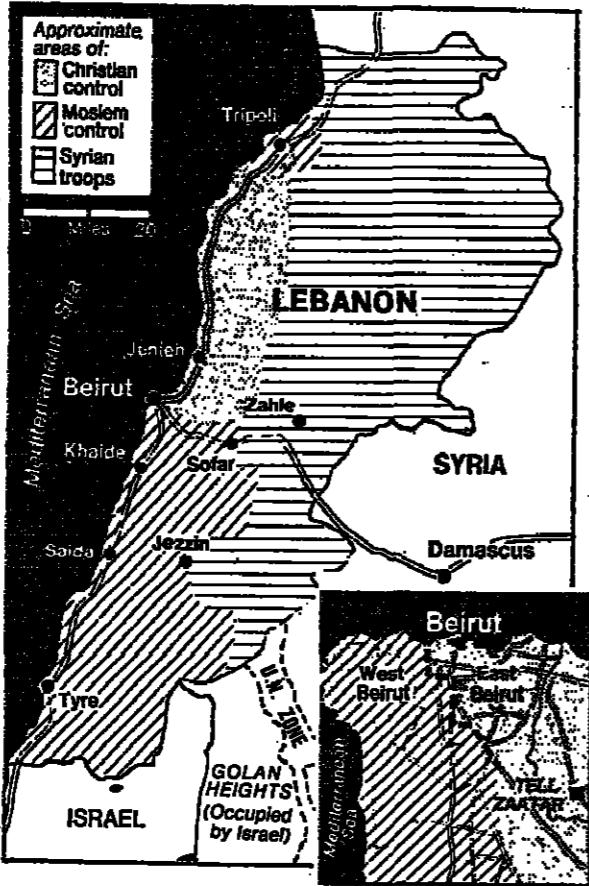

The guerrillas had obtained the unrestricted use of the trail—unhindered by Lebanese authorities—in the Cairo agreement concluded in November of 1969 after gaining the upper hand, with Syrian help, in their first confrontation with the small Lebanese Army.

Now Syria's intervention has closed that lifeline. The official Syrian explanation for its intervention is that it is intended to apply the Cairo agreement by forcing the guerrillas to extricate themselves from Lebanon's internal affairs and to abide by all the agreement's provisions. Some of the provisions placed restrictions on the freedom of movement and the actions of guerrillas outside their camps and bases.

The Palestinians, however, contend that Syria acted only after the rightist Christians failed in their goal of destroying the guerrilla movement. Whatever the reasons for the Syrian action, it has tipped the military balance in favor of the rightist Christians and threatened the survival of the Palestinian movement.

The conflict between Syria and the Palestinians did not arise suddenly. The original gains that the Palestinians achieved in Lebanon were with the help of the militant regime that ruled in Damascus before it was ousted by Hafez al-Assad in November 1970. Shortly after the coup the Assad regime placed restrictions on guerrilla operations from Syria whether they were aimed at Jordan or Israel.

Syrian-Palestinian relations:

The New York Times, Aug. 18, 1976
Palestinians with Moslems and leftists under siege in Tripoli, Beirut and south. Syrians block Damascus road.

were further strained by the close cooperation that President Assad eventually established with King Hussein of Jordan, whose army drove the guerrillas from all their bases in Jordan in 1970 and 1971.

Palestinian suspicions of Syria increased as relations between Damascus and Amman improved over the last year. Palestinian leaders say they felt Syria was seeking to help King Hussein regain his position as a negotiator in any Middle East settlement involving the West Bank of the Jordan River. King Hussein gave up this role in 1974 and joined in recognizing the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole legitimate representative of the West Bank Palestinians. Arab diplomats note that after the Egyptian and Syrian disengagement agreements with Israel in 1974 and 1975 it became evident that partial solutions were over and that the time for an overall settlement—if one was to be reached—was at hand. And it was evident that there would have to be Palestinian participation in any such agreement. But Israel would not negotiate with the P.L.O. and Washington would not recognize it as a party to negotiations.

Thus, Palestinian leaders contend, a "tame Palestinian movement" was needed, and Syria set about trying to tame the Palestinians through its military involvement in Lebanon.

Yasir Arafat, the head of the P.L.O., has appealed to Egypt for support in the conflict with the Syrians, but Palestinian sources say that so far President Anwar el-Sadat has given only "lip service" in support of the Palestinians. Although Egypt's relations with Syria have been strained since Cairo's last disengagement agreement with the Israelis, the Palestinians joined Damascus in attacking Egypt for the agreement and Cairo's relations with the P.L.O. have not been good. Also, Egypt's relations with Libya, one of the Palestinians' strongest supporters, are strained. The P.L.O.'s other strong supporter, Iraq, also has poor relations with the Syrians. Although the Libyans and the Iraqis have attempted to stop the bloodshed in Lebanon, the pan-Arab peacekeeping force that they attempted to establish has not been able to bring about a cease-fire.

The silence of other Arab regimes was interpreted by Palestinians as approval of the Syrian military drive in Lebanon.

The Palestinians regard Lebanon as their "last horizon" and feel that they must hold on to the positions in the Beirut area and southern Lebanon if they are to survive. As one Palestinian said, "What is important is to insure the survival of the movement with the hope that better conditions will emerge in the Arab world."

Guerrilla leaders have repeatedly pointed out that the Palestinians need a base of operations in an Arab country bordering Israel, that they cannot operate from such distant countries as Libya and Iraq even though those countries support the movement.

Palestinians will lose if they are driven out is the strongest base they have had since they left Palestine in 1948 when Israel was founded. There are estimated to be 450,000 Palestinians in Lebanon, including about 100,000 in the 15 refugee camps that were set up in 1948. Under the 1969 Cairo Agreement the Palestinians were given complete control of the camps, which were later fortified against attack. They were also allowed to set up military bases in southern Lebanon from which to attack Israel. In addition, the freedom of the press that exists here allowed the Palestinians to readily promote their views, something they feel would not be the case in other Arab countries.

Now, between the efforts of the right-wing Christians and the Syrian forces, the Palestinians face the possibility of losing this base and going underground. Arab diplomats do not rule out the possibility of Syria's creating its own rival Palestinian organization, which to an extent already exists in the Syrian-sponsored As Saïqa.

Various Splits

The P.L.O. originally came into being in May 1964 as an agency of the Arab League, but it was taken over and given substance by the guerrilla groups in 1969, when Mr. Arafat, head of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla group, became chairman. Since then it has been a coalition of various guerrilla groups, including As Saïqa, the Iraqi-sponsored Arab Liberation Front, Dr. George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, Al Fatah and the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the General Command of the Popular Front.

However, over the past few years there have been various splits within the P.L.O. In September 1974 Dr. Habash withdrew from the P.L.O. executive committee in protest against what he regarded as a policy that was leaning toward negotiations with Israel. Dr. Habash became head of the so-called rejection front, opposing any negotiations with Israel, and was joined by the Arab Liberation Front and the General Command.

Syrian intervention in Lebanon threw the rejection front and Al Fatah back together, but led to the split between As Saïqa and the P.L.O. At the same time a split developed between the P.L.O. and its military arm, the Palestine Liberation Army, which, because three of its brigades were based in Syria, was under virtual Syrian control.

Syria sent the Palestine Liberation Army troops to Lebanon to enforce its policies, but the P.L.O. regained control of the brigades in the Beirut area and those in southern Lebanon. The other Palestine Liberation Army units were recalled to Syria for fear they would also defect to the P.L.O.

With all the confusion it is difficult to say what forces the P.L.O. can count on, but the Palestinians readily admit that the situation brings their survival into question. Thus they will do their utmost to hold on to their positions in the Beirut area and in southern Lebanon until conditions in the Arab world become more favorable. One Palestinian said that primarily this meant a new regime in Damascus.

Many Palestinians feel that if the movement is suppressed in Lebanon, it will have to go underground here and in other Arab countries. "Then no one should blame us if we resort to acts of terrorism," one Palestinian said.

Israeli Official Disavows Any Blockade of Lebanon

Special to The New York Times
TEL AVIV, Aug. 17—Defense Minister Shimon Peres denied today that Israel had intervened in the Lebanese civil war by stopping ships sailing to or from Moslem-controlled southern Lebanese ports.

The official told representatives of Israeli news organizations that Israeli warships patrolling the Mediterranean were guarding against terrorist attempts to land men or equipment on the Israeli coast. Acknowledging that six vessels had been stopped and searched since June 1, he said that this had been done only when the Israelis had reason to suspect that the vessels were carrying terrorists or sabotage equipment.

"We never declared a naval blockade and we have no intention of declaring any," he said.

French Teacher Captured On Kenya Border Is Freed

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, Aug. 17 (Agence France-Presse)—Alain Galup, a French teacher captured when gunmen attacked a hotel at Moyale on the Ethiopian-Kenyan border two weeks ago, has been freed and is expected to return here, diplomatic sources said.

A French woman wounded in the attack died on her way to a hospital in Nairobi. Two other French citizens traveling to Kenya in the same group were hospitalized with bullet wounds but have since been reported out of danger.

There was no indication of the identity of the attackers, assumed by observers to have been Somali guerrillas.

and Leftists Recruiting Fighting Battle in Lebanon

SPECIAL TO THE NEW YORK TIMES

Aug. 17—radio spoke of fighting at Ham-mation Organ-mana. It did not say which ist and Mos-forces were involved in the gun to recruit clazabas, however.

Throughout the night and this morning, Beirut echoed to the sound of explosions as rival of Lebanon to combatants kept up the fighting in the downtown commercial center and in the southern alliance has suburbs. A right-wing radio station said that anti-aircraft guns in the "army" and rifle-propelled grenades were used in hitting enemy positions.

The leftists have rejected a proposal put forward in a speech yesterday by President Suleiman Franjeh for a political truce, which he made dependent on the Palestinian guerrillas' first submitting to restrictions under agreements already concluded with the Lebanese authorities.

The two leading leftist daily newspapers, al-Moharrer and as-Safir, said in their leading stories today that Mr. Franjeh's speech had added fuel to the fire of the crisis when he launched a vehement attack against the Palestinians.

Muslims Exhorted

A right-wing leader, Pierre Gemayel, has again urged Lebanese Muslims to shake off what he called the "Palestinian domination." In a statement quoted by the radio station of his Phalangist Party, Mr. Gemayel said that only then would the Muslims be free to start a dialogue with the Christians.

Mr. Gemayel's proposal earlier for reconstructing the Lebanon Government system on the basis of decentralization has had an unsettling effect in Muslim and leftist quarters.

The proposal was interpreted as tantamount to partition, Moslem leaders discussed the matter at a meeting yesterday but did not issue a statement.

Meanwhile, Palestinian sources announced that several guerrilla leaders had succeeded in escaping from Tell Zaatar and had safely reached Palestinian-held areas.

U.S. Operation of Boston School Is Upheld by Court of Appeals

BOSTON, Aug. 17 (AP)—The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit ruled today that an order placing racially troubled South Boston High School in Federal receivership was justified to protect black students.

However, the court said that the Federal takeover, ordered last December by Federal District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr., should end as soon as the school could safely be turned back to local officials.

The Boston School Committee chairman, John McDonough, said the committee would appeal to the Supreme Court.

The high school, in largely Irish South Boston, has been a focal point of sometimes violent opposition to busing since Judge Garrity ordered the city's school system integrated two years ago.

In a 16-page decision, the appeals court said, "The evidence here does not show that the [district court] went beyond what might reasonably be considered necessary to cope with a grave threat to a desegregation plan and to the safety and rights of black students at South Boston High School."

The receivership order was one of the most controversial decisions by Judge Garrity, who has overseen, and sometimes personally directed, the school system since 1974.

The judge named the school superintendent, Marlon Fahey, to be the Federal receiver in day-to-day charge of the racially tense school. He has ordered a shuffling of the school's faculty, repairs to its building and other changes.

"Black students attending the school were not receiving a peaceful, desegregated education," the appeals court said. "Rather, they were subject to insult, intimidation and continued segregation."

The court said that more typical solutions, such as contempt proceedings and injunctions, were not promising. "They invited further confrontation, and delay, and when the usual remedies are inadequate, a court of equity is justified in turning to less common ones, such as receivership, to get the job done."

Judge Garrity's order marked the only time that control of a school has been taken out of the hands of elected local officials.

However, the appeals court said, "The fact that a school committee is elected, not appointed, cannot put it beyond the reach of the law."

The appeals court conceded that the receivership was a drastic step and said it "should last longer than conditions which justify it make necessary."

The five-member Boston School Committee appealed Judge Garrity's decision.

Pay Rise Denied for Jurors in Chesimard Murder Case

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Aug. 17 (AP)—Superior Court Judge has refused a request by Poane Chesimard, a black militant, to pay jurors at her murder trial next month more than the customary $5 a day.

Judge Theodore Appleby said that he deplored the small amount paid to jurors by the state, but that he had no jurisdiction to give them a raise.

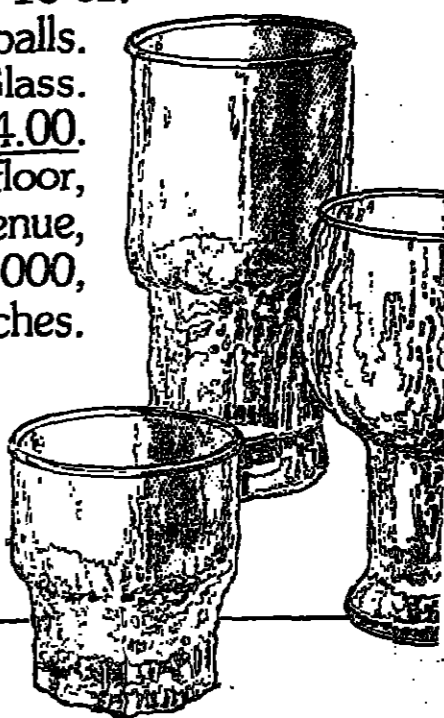

Defense attorneys for Mrs. Chesimard who is charged with the murder of a state trooper, asked for the pay increase yesterday because they said the $5 a day stipend kept working-class persons from serving on juries.

Mrs. Chesimard, leader of the Black Army, is scheduled for trial Sept. 22. Her lawyer, Clark Squire, said she is not sure she can afford to pay the attorneys' fees.

LIMITS ANNOUNCED FOR SST POLLUTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (AP)—The Environmental Protection Agency today announced standards limiting the amount of air pollution that can be made by supersonic passenger planes built after 1979.

The standards will not apply to Concorde now flying or in production, an agency spokesman said. However, they will require that any first-generation supersonic aircraft built after Jan. 1, 1980, and any second-generation SST built after Jan. 1, 1984, meet certain pollution standards.

The standards allow supersonic jets such as the Concorde to produce nearly four times as much pollution as subsonic jets. There are technical problems in reducing pollution in supersonic jet engines, a factor that the E.P.A. said it had to consider in setting the standards.

The agency said that engines such as those powering the Concorde must be modified to reduce carbon-monoxide emissions by 58 percent and hydrocarbons by 77 percent if they are manufactured after Jan. 1, 1980. Permissible nitrogen oxide levels will be about the same as the engines currently produce.

The agency said that second-generation supersonic engines built after Jan. 1, 1984, would be required to reduce carbon monoxide levels by 88 percent, hydrocarbons by 94 percent and nitrogen oxides by 44 percent from current Concorde-type engines.

TWA. Number One on-time airline.

TWA's on-time performance record has beaten every major domestic airline for the last 4 months running. And TWA has beaten American and United for the last 14 consecutive months. This is based on the most recent CAB on-time records through May, 1976.

The CAB requires airlines to report the percentage of flights actually flown which arrived on time, or within 15 minutes of schedule, between the 100 busiest U.S. city pairs. TWA figures represent 55% of our available seat miles. As of May, the reports include the 200 busiest city pairs and represent 70% of our available seat miles.

Ex-Aide Describes F.B.I. Burglaries, Saying He Gave Approval

ence in sensitive intelligence investigations. Mr. Gray, who took over the burden after the death of J. Edgar Hoover in May 1972, had told a Washington conference of the heads of the bureau's 59 field offices that "he would approve these things" but cautioned the agents to "be damn sure you get bureau approval" before carrying them out.

Through his lawyer, Mr. Gray, who now lives in Stonington, Conn., denied "condoning or approving, directly or indirectly, any illegal act" by the F.B.I. Told of Mr. Gray's denial, Mr. Felt conceded that his recollection of the circumstances of Mr. Gray's approval was "hazy" and said that in any event his authorization had been predicated on "the belief that that was what he [Mr. Gray] wanted."

Justice Dept. Inquiry A number of burglaries of friends and associates of the Weather fugitives were carried out by F.B.I. agents in the New York City area in 1972 and 1973 and are now the focus of an investigation by the Justice Department's civil rights division.

No Previous Comment The burglary of the Arab Information Center, for example, is not understood to be a subject of the Justice Department's inquiry. The New York Times has reported that Mr. Gray approved that operation, and he has reportedly told friends that he believed it to be legal because a foreign espionage matter was involved.

Mr. Pottinger's investigation is known to be proceeding on the assumption that such break-ins, none of which were accompanied by search warrants, constitute a violation of the Federal civil rights statutes in cases where the targets had no foreign intelligence connections.

Mr. Pottinger's office, which is trying to trace knowledge and approval of the illegal burglaries up through Mr. Gray's chain of command, is understood to be investigating, in addition to Mr. Felt's assertions, Mr. Gray's attendance at a second meeting at the bureau's Quantico, Va., training facility in the summer of 1972.

Although Mr. Felt took responsibility today for having authorized that burglary, he said in the interview that he believed he had later advised Mr. Gray of his action in that case and also in connection with his approval of the Weather fugitive burglary.

But he said that Mr. Gray, who was immersed in the F.B.I.'s Watergate investigation and, later, in his own abortive confirmation hearings, "didn't even know what was being said to him, he was so busy."

Mr. Gray, who left the bureau in April 1973 after his nomination as its director was withdrawn by President Nixon, has until now not commented publicly on his year-long tenure. But he said today through Stephen H. Sachs, his attorney, that he had never approved "surreptitious entries in the investigations of Weathermen fugitives."

According to records prepared by the Watergate special prosecutor's office, which investigated the possibility that Mr. Gray had perjured himself during his 1973 confirmation hearings, Mr. Gray did attend a meeting of the heads of the bureau's field office in May 1972, two weeks after he replaced Mr. Hoover. That, he said, was the only such meeting he attended in Washington, and he has told associates that he does not recall any discussions of surreptitious entries.

Charles W. Bates, now the head of the F.B.I.'s San Francisco office, said in a telephone interview today that he was present at the May 18 meeting and did not recall Mr. Gray having made any statement like that described by Mr. Felt.

Mr. Felt said, however, that the meeting he recollected in a "hazy" way had taken place later in the summer of 1972, on Aug. 29, he believed. But according to records Mr. Gray's activities, that the period during which conferences on Weather fugitives was taking place at Quantico in Washington.

In a related development, Gene V. Youths on a street corner on Detroit's East Side where gangs have been congregating

Vicious Youth Gangs Plague Detroit

Beyond the violence of gang activities and the large number of participants—the police estimate that there are nine gangs with a total of 300 to 400 members—officials are alarmed by what they see as a new level of sophistication in Detroit's gangs.

Officials who have studied the gangs say that each one has a structure designed to protect its 10 to 20 hard-core leaders, who usually range in age from 17 to 20 and who usually have long criminal records.

The crimes carried out in the gang's name are typically committed by members younger than 17, members who are subject to criminal prosecution as juveniles, not as adults, the police say.

"They have a free ride until they're 17," said Philip G. Tannian, Detroit's police chief, echoing the sentiments of many juvenile justice officials who lament that youthful offenders may be arrested scores of times before facing any punishment.

The foot collected in the forays by younger members is turned over to the gang leaders, or "top dogs," who supply weapons and encouragement to their followers, according to the police.

Members achieve status in the gang by showing heart, usually evidenced by an act of violence against a victim or a rival gang member.

"They have the discipline of organized crime," said Chief Tannian. "Among youngsters this young, this is unique."

Leaders Unruffled Because the crime is typically committed by juveniles, the Chief said, the gang leaders are largely untouchable. "How do you deal with them," he asked, "if you can't get kids to testify that someone told them to go and rob a grocery store?"

The robberies and assaults have left a pervasive tension in Detroit, not just on the East Side, a rundown area of abandoned stores and homes with high unemployment and welfare rolls, but around the city.

An elderly white woman said that she had twice been a passenger on a bus which was attacked by a gang. "You'll never get over that fear," she said, adding that she goes shopping less often now than she used to.

A black cleaning woman in a downtown building said that she was not so fortunate. "You hear it on the news," she said. "You get nervous. But you got to work. What are you going to do?"

On the East Side, some residents are ready to take matters into their own hands. "If I know who steals or breaks into my home," said a black man leaning on a shovel in his front yard, "I'm going to hunt him. I'm going to hunt him. They can lock me up, but that's the only thing left. The police, they're not doing the job."

Police Short of Men For the police, who have been short of manpower because of layoffs, the job has not been easy. Mayor Coleman Young announced at the end of July a major effort to clear the streets of gang members, but the police often responded to calls too slowly.

When arrests were made, witnesses were often too fearful to testify. Chief Tannian recalled an incident in which six plainclothes policemen caught a gang robbing an old man.

"The man was terrified," he said. "We had six policemen there, but it took us two hours to convince him to sign a complaint."

Five of the 18 adults arrested in the Cobo Hall incident Sunday were arraigned yesterday, but the cases against them were dismissed because the victims did not appear to prosecute them.

So disdainful of law enforcement had one gang become that last month its members shot out the windows of the Fifth Precinct house, on the East Side.

Patrols Increased The attack at Cobo Hall pushed the tension to the crisis point, however. City officials recalled to duty 450 policemen who had been laid off, increased patrols in the downtown area and declared a 10 P.M. curfew for persons younger than 18.

There have been campaigns before, though, in the most recent one a juvenile crime center was established. Youths arrested in connection with felonies were taken to the center for photographing and fingerprinting, then placed in the Wayne County youth home.

But many of the cases were dismissed—at least in part, juvenile authorities say, because of poor police work.

Despite the city's efforts, the terrorism has continued. Hundreds of East Side businessmen have moved or closed their stores, and those who remain have installed inch-thick Plexiglass windows and hired security guards. Even such measures are useless, however, when 15 or 20 youths storm a store, disarm the guard, ransack the displays and flee. Identification is virtually impossible, the police say, because of the large number of attackers.

Increasingly, says one officer in the Fifth Precinct, the targets of such raids have been gun stores. "The big thing now," he said, "is to arm yourself."

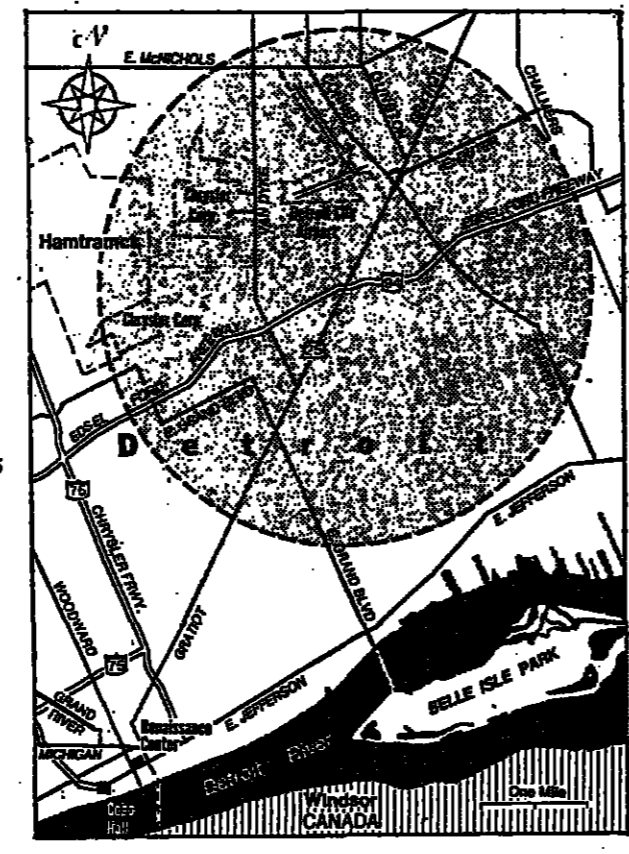

One result of that trend has been shoot-outs between rival gangs. Last month, five members of the "Errol Flynns" were wounded in an early morning gun battle with members of the "Black Killers" who were riding in a pickup truck. Two days later, a 14-year-old East Side boy, not a member of a gang, was seriously injured when five shots were fired at him from a passing automobile.

In the aftermath of this violence, the streets are empty on the East Side now; there are no idle strollers or neighbors taking the summer air on front porches.

And James H. Lincoln, executive judge of the Wayne County Juvenile Court, reflected that the youths he sees today are more violent than those who stood before him in years past.

"They would as soon stab somebody as have a cup of coffee," he said.

The precautions were issued in part because tests conducted at the University of Connecticut Medical School by a team headed by Dr. F. William Sunderman Jr. measured exceedingly high nickel levels in tissues from legionnaires and from a victim of an unrelated cause of death.

Dr. Sunderman declared the results reflected contamination, probably through the use of nickel-bearing metal instruments or containers, in the autopsy procedure.

Nonetheless, ordinary metal instruments were used in an autopsy conducted last night by Dr. Peter Cera on one of the latest victims, Harold Stump, a 38-year-old legionnaire from Milton, Pa.

"I received no such instructions," Dr. Cera said of the Stratford directive to avoid metal instruments. He said that tissues obtained in the autopsy were placed in plastic containers and that portions were sent to the state laboratory in Philadelphia for toxicologic and other tests.

Consent Forms for Flu Vaccine Drive

Special to The New York Times

The name is the National Commission for the Protection of Human Subjects of Biomedical and Behavioral Research, was established by Congress and began its two-year term about one and a half years ago. Its members include lawyers, medical scientists, theologians and others concerned with the impact of public policies and human rights.

The legislation passed by Congress last week was designed to deal with the liability insurance problem for vaccine manufacturers that had delayed some of the vaccination program for about two months. Insurance companies have balked at insuring the vaccine makers for liability in the huge Government-sponsored flu vaccine effort.

Congress, acting just before the recess for the Republican convention, passed a law specifying that all claims for injury in the vaccine program be filed against the Federal Government. The Government then would sue any manufacturer or other program participant whose negligence was the basis for the original suit.

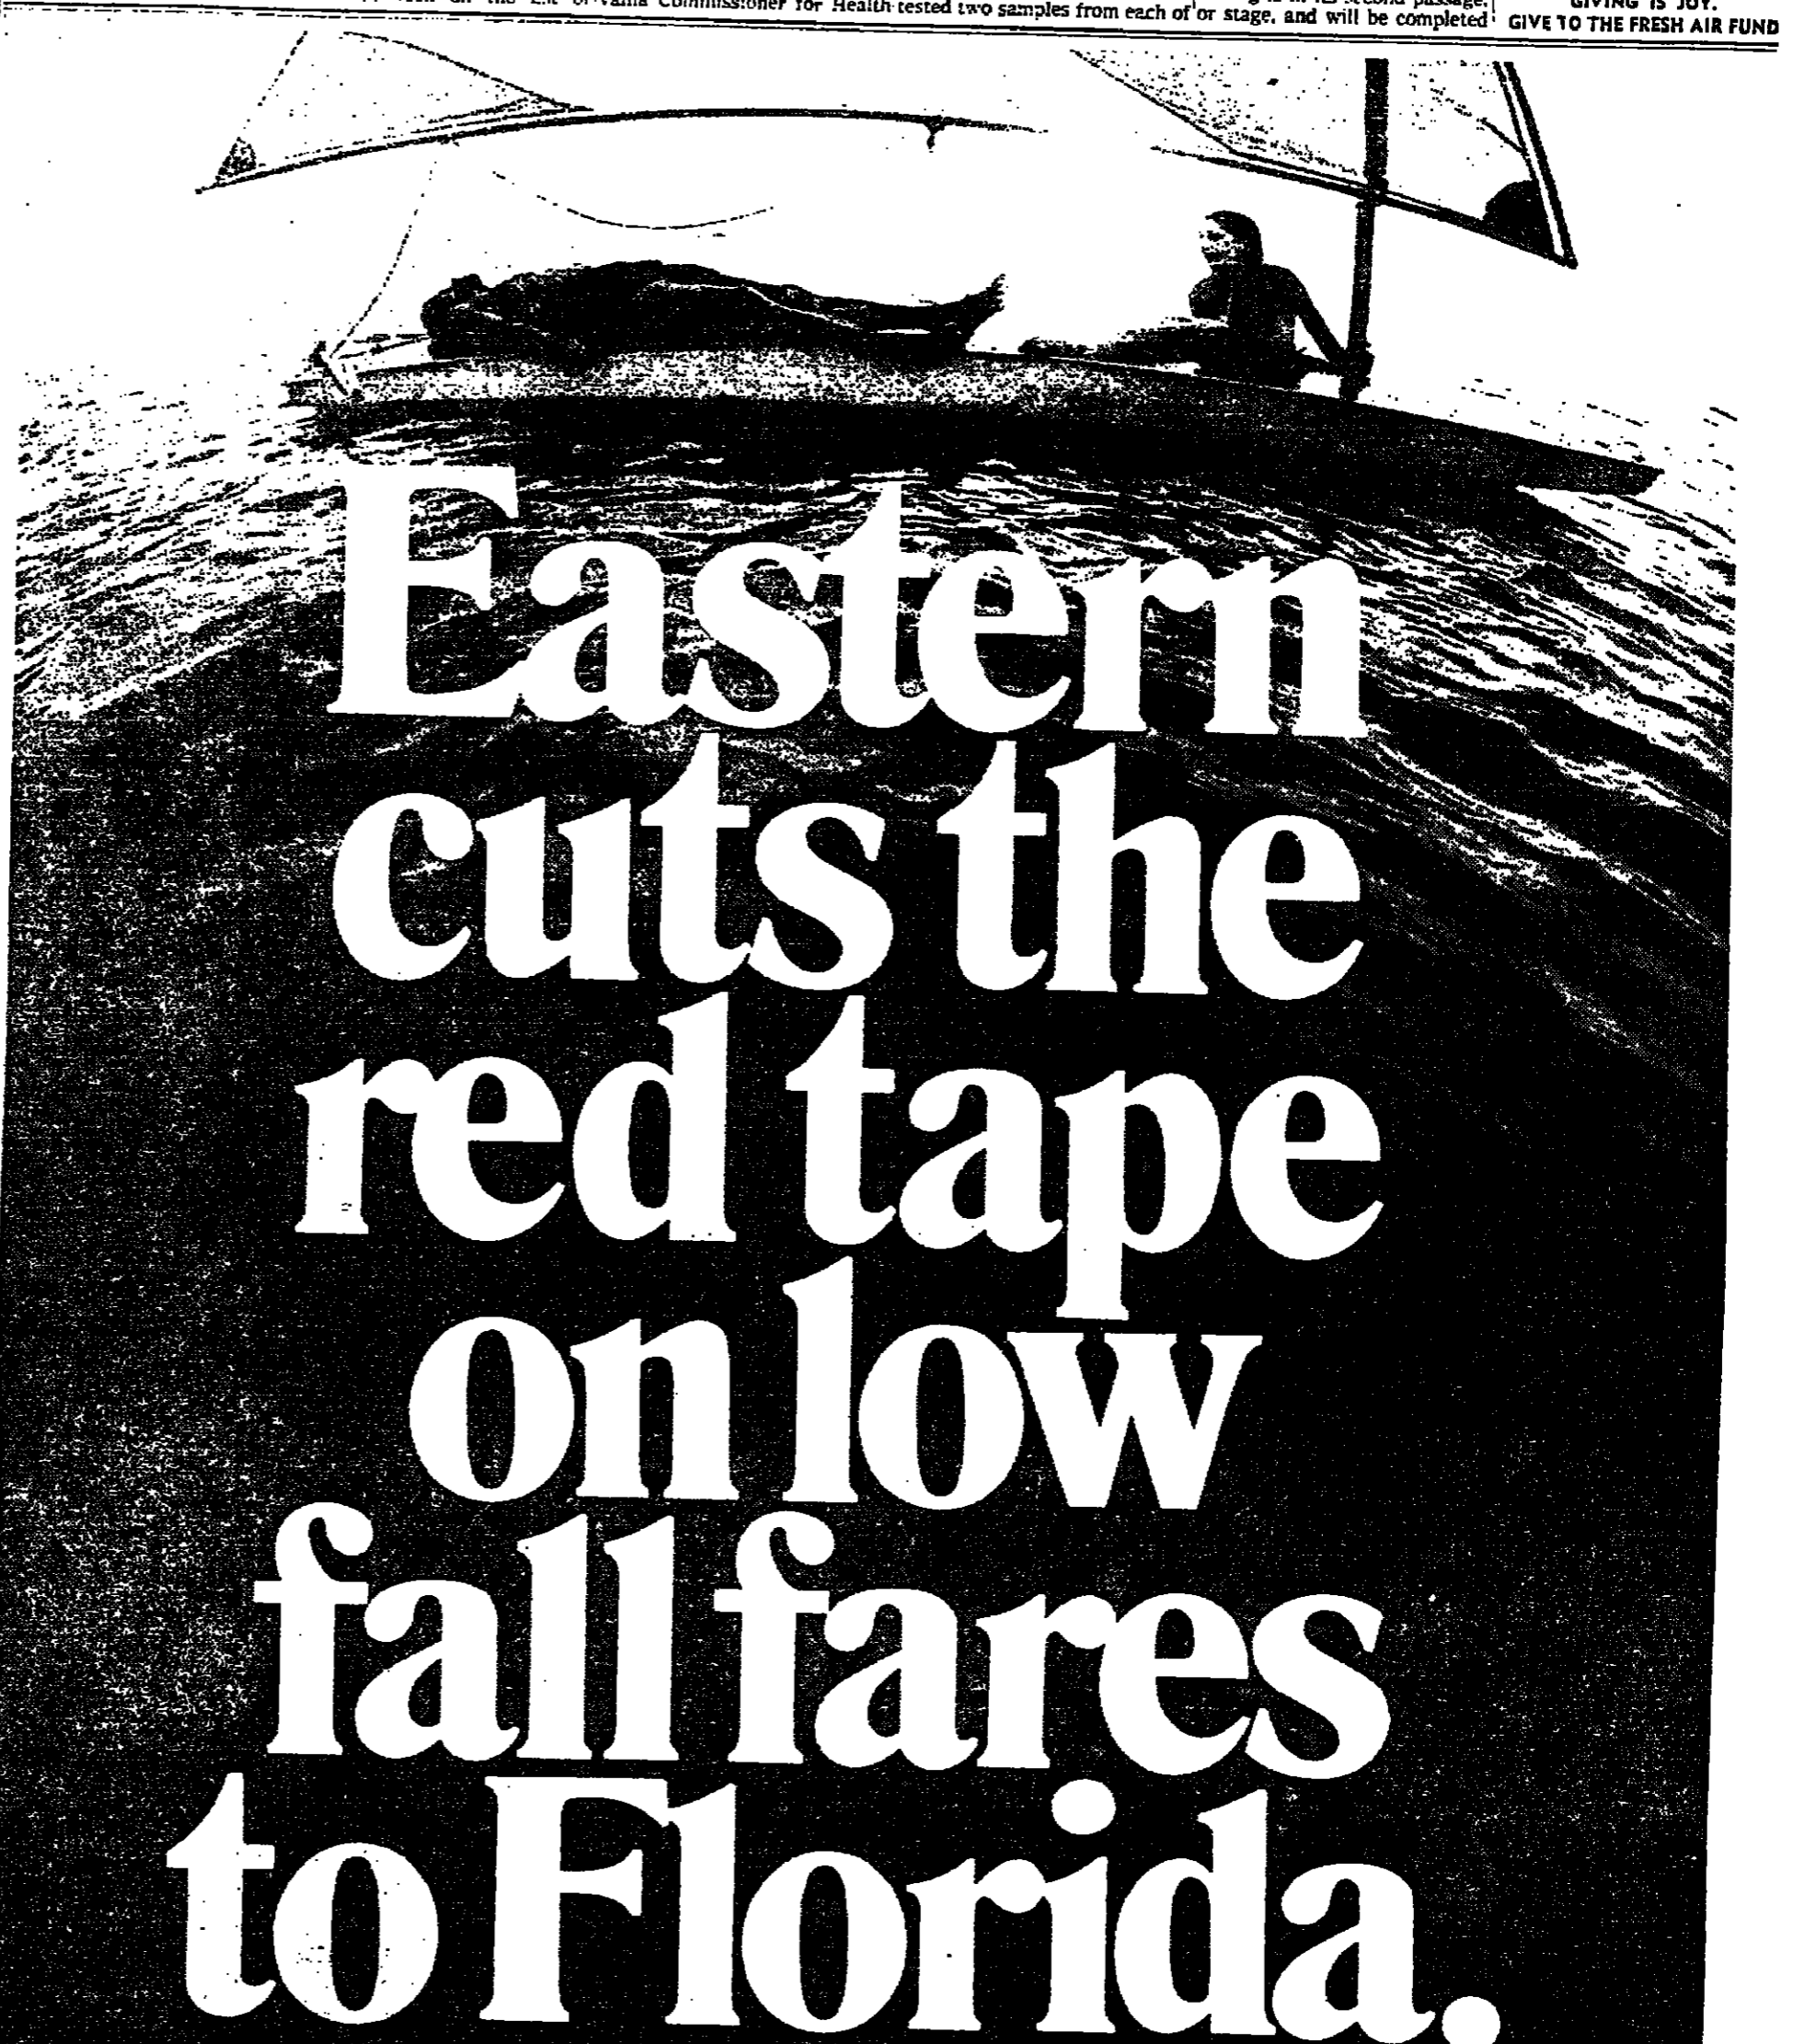

The law also specified that the national commission consult with the managers of the vaccination program in developing and implementing a written informed consent form and other procedures to insure that the person taking the vaccine knows the risks as well as the benefits of the vaccine.

Well, now Eastern has made it easier to save 20% off the regular round-trip daycoach fares and 25% off on Night Coach to any of Eastern's Florida cities. All you have to do is make your reservations and pay for your round-trip ticket at least 7 days before your flight.

You can stay as long as 30 days. Or as little as one night, as long as it's a Sunday night.

Maybe best of all, you can now change your return reservations any time during your stay, without losing your 20% or 25% discount fare. And without worrying about the usual advance purchase requirements on return reservations.

Women's Bank Is Accused of Discharging a Pregnant Clerk

By MARY BREASTED
A 23-year-old Queens woman has accused the First Women's Bank of sex discrimination because, she says, it dismissed her soon after she told her superiors she was pregnant.

The plaintiff is Susan Salvia of Corona. Her lawyer, Merrick Rossen of Queens Legal Services, said yesterday that he would file complaints on her behalf tomorrow with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the city's Commission on Human Rights, charging the bank with violations of Federal civil-rights legislation and city law covering employment practices.

Late in the day, a director of the bank said that Mrs. Salvia had been let go only because she "refused to go back to a teller's job" that she had been moved out of several months before she was dismissed, and not because she was pregnant.

The New York Times
Susan Salvia

The First Women's Bank, which opened at 111 East 57th Street last October, was organized by several prominent feminists, women lawyers and banking experts. Its offering circular, published a year earlier, said the bank would "engage in general commercial banking in the New York metropolitan area, paying special attention to the needs of women by treating all persons in a nondiscriminatory manner."

Bank Is Confident
Eileen Preiss, a director of the bank who is in charge of public relations, said: "We don't discriminate in any way. If a proceeding is brought, it will be adjudicated, and we feel that we will prevail."

Mrs. Preiss declined to say why Mrs. Salvia was dismissed from her bank clerk's job.

Mr. Rossen said: "The bank has given two different reasons for firing her. The bank's law-yeer, Evelyn Lehman, told me several employees and former employees, all of whom, he said, told him she was "a very good worker." He said he spoke with one of the employees who said he had overheard the bank's controller, Penny H. Jones, say of Mrs. Salvia that "she's doing great work," shortly before the dismissal.

Mr. Rossen said that his sources had told him they were afraid to speak out publicly because they were angry at their superiors at the First Women's Bank or at their current places of employment.

Both Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Lehman declined to answer telephone messages left for them yesterday, and Mrs. Preiss declined to comment on details of Mrs. Salvia's charges.

Mrs. Salvia said that she left her teller's job at the European American Bank last January to go with the First Women's Bank "because I thought they were better for women, and I could advance faster there."

She said she was hired as a special service clerk, which included being a teller, that she worked for several months as a teller and then was moved into the bank's bookkeeping department, where she performed various collection and bookkeeping tasks.

"Wanted to Be Honest"
She said that in early June she told her superior, Penny Jones, that she was pregnant, one week after her physician told her so.

Mrs. Preiss insisted that "no one at the bank has told anyone that Mrs. Salvia was fired for incompetence."

Mrs. Salvia supports her husband, Michael, who is a student at Mount Sinai Medical School, where he is completing his third year.

"He was so upset when this happened," she said yesterday. "I wanted to drop out of school."

Mr. Rossen said he had investigated Mrs. Salvia's complaint before deciding to file charges "because it sounded so incredible I just couldn't believe it was true."

He said that he spoke with several of her supervisors, bank employees and former employees, all of whom, he said, told him she was "a very good worker." He said he spoke with one of the employees who said he had overheard the bank's controller, Penny H. Jones, say of Mrs. Salvia that "she's doing great work," shortly before the dismissal.

Mr. Rossen said that his sources had told him they were afraid to speak out publicly because they were angry at their superiors at the First Women's Bank or at their current places of employment.

Both Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Lehman declined to answer telephone messages left for them yesterday, and Mrs. Preiss declined to comment on details of Mrs. Salvia's charges.

75 Jersey Children Get Swine-Flu Test Shots
NEWARK, Aug. 17 (AP)—Seventy-five children of employees at St. Michael's Medical Center received swine flu inoculations yesterday in a program to test the effectiveness of various vaccines.

"None of the vaccines being tested are considered dangerous," said Dr. Peter Gross, director for infectious diseases at Hackensack Hospital. It's a matter of determining the best type of vaccine and the best method which will result in the highest level of immunization with a minimum of reactions.

Dr. Gross is one of 10 investigators working under a Federal grant to test swine flu vaccines nationwide. Test vaccinations were administered in May at Hackensack Hospital and at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York.

13th Dead in Refinery Blast
CHALMETTE, La., Aug. 17 (UPI)—A 13th man died today of injuries he received last Thursday night in an explosion inside a 20-story oil refinery.

A spokesman said John Esposito of Chalmette had died of kidney failure after being in critical condition since the blast killed 12 men and injured seven others at the Tenneco Oil plant. Six men remained in hospital.

Suit Seeks to Put McCarthy On the Ballot in Missouri
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 17 (AP)—A suit has been filed in United States District Court to place Eugene J. McCarthy, the former Democratic senator from Minnesota, on the Missouri general election ballot as an independent candidate for President.

The suit, filed by the American Civil Liberties Union, alleges that nomination petitions for independent candidates must be filed in April while party candidates are not selected until August.

The Missouri Secretary of State, James Kirkpatrick, is the defendant in the suit, which was shifted to the court's Jefferson City division.

Jerseyan Arrested in Rape
MIDDLETOWN, N.J., Aug. 17 (AP)—A Keyport, N.J., man has been arrested and charged with rape, armed robbery and threatening to kill a 20-year-old Hazlet woman, the police said.

A Superior Court judge set bail at $25,000 for the man, Ronald Smith, 22 years old. The authorities said that the victim, who was not identified, was getting into her car at a shopping center last Friday when a man pulled a knife on her, forced her into her car, beat her and then drove to a secluded area where he raped her. The police said the man had threatened to kill the victim if she told anyone about the incident.

"Pollution" is a dirty word. So is "unemployment."

All of us want to live in a clean environment, as free from pollution as possible. And all of us want to live in a prosperous America, with jobs enough for everyone.

At Bethlehem, we're working very hard to achieve both. But corporations have to budget their resources just as families do. We can't do everything we'd like to do, and we can't do everything at once.

For example, it's expected that our country is going to need a lot more steelmaking capacity—about 30 million added tons by 1983.

Gearing up to meet that anticipated demand would (1) help maintain jobs in the steel industry, and (2) create jobs for thousands and thousands of people in other industries—in construction, in equipment manufacturing, and in scores of service industries. But expansion of this magnitude takes vast sums of money. And over the past inflation-recession years, we just haven't been able to generate enough money to do that job.

So we had to make a tough choice. We had to "stretch out" the completion of a number of expansion projects we had under way. That cost people jobs.

One program we had to continue: pollution control. So far, Bethlehem has spent approximately $400 million to clean up a major portion of the pollutants from the air and water we use. In an effort to meet existing laws and regulations, we have many more projects under way or anticipated in the near future. Cost? About $600 million over the next five years.

Is there any relief in sight? Depending upon how far regulatory agencies go in stringent interpretation of the present laws and regulations, we may be faced with spending hundreds of millions more to try to remove the last traces of pollutants. We do not believe that this would be money well spent.

Attempting to remove the last increment of pollution involves new and uncertain technology. The attempt will consume a considerable amount of scarce energy and natural resources. And, in many cases, it will merely transfer pollution problems to the power companies or chemical manufacturers.

Is it time for a rearrangement of priorities? We are faced as a nation with troublesome alternatives. Do we continue our headlong rush to implement some of the air and water clean-up standards that have yet to be proved necessary—or even sound—or shall we give equal consideration to jobs, our energy requirements, capital needs, and other demands for social priorities?

We believe the national interest now requires that we face up to the dual necessity of preserving our environment while at the same time assuring economic progress.

Our booklet, "Steelmaking and the Environment," tells more about what we're doing to help solve the problems of pollution. For a free copy, write: Public Affairs Dept., Room 476-NT, Bethlehem Steel Corp., Bethlehem, PA 18016.

In a Tough Race, Vezel Campaigning for Political Life

By DAVID VIDAL
Herman may stage a radical change in his political philosophy, overshadowed by Councilman Vezel for the district seat.

The 1st Congressional District has undergone a dramatic change in registered voters, some of whom were relocated because of tenement fires in the South Bronx and others who dropped because they did not vote within the prescribed time. When Mr. Badillo won the 1974 primary without opposition, 36,105 Democrats were registered in the 21st District.

Today, there are only 49,842 registered Democrats in the district and since virtually all the black and Hispanic political leaders there have announced they will vote for Mr. Vezel, the decline in voters is more likely to hurt Mr. Badillo.

Since turnouts for primary elections have traditionally been far lower than those for general elections, the expected split in the Puerto Rican vote, until now a single block representing about 40 percent of the votes in the district, could make the race even tighter.

Mr. Vezel, who is feared for his ability to quickly mobilize his campaign and supporters, stands to increase his influence by the measure that weakens Mr. Badillo, even if he should not win.

This is why a friend of Mr. Badillo, who works closely with all the Puerto Rican community organizations throughout the city, said that the race "has too many ingredients."

Earlier this month, Mr. Vezel sued WNEW-TV and Steve Bauman, a reporter for the station, for $20 million for libel because of some of the charges made in the television series.

They involved alleged irregularities in the handling of money at the Puerto Rican Day Parade Committee and the Puerto Rican Community Development Project, both of which are headed by Mr. Vezel.

Roberto Napoleon, treasurer of the Puerto Rican Parade Committee, has been repeating the charges in the Spanish-language press and on radio stations.

Yesterday, he said that he had turned over his records to the Internal Revenue Service for investigation because Mr. Vezel had allegedly asked him on several occasions to "falsify" his records and that "I refused to become a part of anything that did not reveal the facts."

WRIGHT'S CHOICE IS DISQUALIFIED

Hamilton Found Ineligible to Seek Assembly Seat

By RONALD SMOTHERS
Political opponents challenging City Councilman Samuel D. S. Boyland in the primary for control of the Democratic Party in central Brooklyn won a round in court yesterday when Mr. Wright's hand-picked candidate in the 54th Assembly District was disqualified from the Sept. 14 primary on the ground that he did not meet the state's residency requirements. However, in a ruling that nullified the political impact of the disqualification, Justice Gerald S. Held of State Supreme Court in Brooklyn said that Mr. Wright's allies could name a replacement for Eimer Hamilton, the disqualified candidate.

Mr. Hamilton, a 39-year-old associate of Mr. Wright's, has been scheduled to face Thomas S. Boyland in the primary to pick the nominee for the Assembly seat once held by Mr. Wright.

Both sides said they would appeal the decision, which came after testimony that Mr. Hamilton had lived in Atlanta and had not maintained a New York residence between 1972 and 1974.

Mr. Boyland denounced the ruling allowing the committee on vacancies named on Mr. Hamilton's nominating petitions to choose a replacement as a "partisan decision" and Mr. Owens charged that it was "a fix."

on vacancies is empowered to act in the event the candidates is disqualified, unable to run because of death or other reasons, or resigns after winning either before taking office or before the term expires.

The fight for control of the 54th Assembly District, covering the Oceanhill-Brownsville area is one of a number where forces led by Senator Owens and Representative Shirley Chisholm seeking to break Mr. Wright's hold on the party.

Carter Watches the Convention and Confers on Energy Policy

By LINDA CHARLTON
Special to The New York Times

PLAINS, Ga., Aug. 17—Jimmy Carter said today that he had watched "segments" of last night's Republican National Convention proceedings and added with a grin: "They talked about me more than the Democrats did."

Mr. Carter said that he had seen and listened to some of Senator Howard H. Baker Jr.'s speech but had not watched Senator Robert Dole. He said that he would prefer to defer commenting on the convention until it was over rather than responding to "a whole series of individual attacks." He added, "I can't say I was very surprised" by the Republican attacks on him.

Jimmy Carter greets some of the participants in his energy briefing at Plains, Ga. With him, from the left: D. K. Davis of Dallas, Dr. Alvin M. Weinberg, the director of the Institute for Energy Analysis of Oak Ridge (Tenn.) Associated Universities, and Harris Arthur, the director of the Navajo Coal Development Impact Project, Shiprock, N.M.

Later today, Mr. Carter met for about four hours with a group of persons concerned with energy—from consumer advocates to the vice president of an oil company—to discuss energy policy. He gave the press a brief distillation of the afternoon's discussion before going back inside the "pound house" for yet another meeting, this time with his regional and state campaign coordinators.

Mr. Carter said that there had been unanimity on the "extreme importance of conservation" if the United States is not to become vulnerable through overdependence on independent oil. As he spoke, it was against a faintly heard background noise of a bus engine running in the dirt road below. The engine had, by then, been running for more than one hour, presumably to insure that the bus was sufficiently air-conditioned by the time the panel of experts embarked for the return trip to Atlanta.

Mr. Carter was asked who was responsible for this situation, and he simply smiled and said, "I presume, the bus driver."

He said that the group had agreed that the United States does not now have a "comprehensive, long-range, understandable energy policy," and that if he was elected he would have a "great opportunity to help devise the comprehensive energy policy in the absence of a crisis."

One of the many other specifics discussed, he said in reply to a question, was that of "vertical divestiture" by the oil companies. He said that he was very interested by a proposal for vertical accountability made by Oklahoma Gov. David L. Boren, which would mean that oil companies would have to file separate income tax returns for each phase to show the profit of each phase of their operations from exploration to marketing.

Mr. Carter, whose tone today was less strongly pro-consumer than when he met last week with a group organized by Ralph Nader, said there had been no discussion of horizontal divestiture, which he considered more important. He said that the range of topics covered had included alternative sources of energy from nuclear to solar, and the importance of not closing out options. This, he said, meant not declaring a moratorium on the use of nuclear power to produce electricity.

The participants in today's energy briefing were Harris Arthur, director of the Navajo Coal Development Impact Project in Shiprock, N.M.; Thomas M. Bethel, the research director of the United Mine Workers; David Boren, Governor of Oklahoma; Wilson Clark, the director of the Environmental Policy Institute; Joan Claybrook, of Public Citizen in Washington, D.C.; D. K. Davis, of Natural Gas Finders Inc., at Energy Research Associates, Dallas, Tex.; Gerald Decker, of the Dow Chemical Company.

Also, Edward Fried, of the Brookings Institute; James Griffin, associate professor of economics at the University of Pennsylvania; Shearson, Harnett, chairman of the Carolina Light and Power Company and president of Electric Power Research Institute; Barbara Heller, director of the Environmental Policy Center; Guy Martin, the Commissioner of Natural Resources for Alaska.

Also, Thomas Sigler, vice president of the Continental Oil Company; Charles Vorsan, a California State Assemblyman who is chairman of the Energy Task Force of the National Conference of State Legislatures; Alvin M. Weinberg, the director of the Institute for Energy Analysis, Oak Ridge Associated Universities, Oak Ridge, Tenn.; and Carlton Neville, the coordinator of the Carter Energy Task Force.

Tomorrow's briefing session, the last of this week's scheduled series, will deal with international economic policy. On Thursday, Mr. Carter is scheduled to go to a picnic given by Capricorn Records in Macon, Ga.

Mondale Critical on Jobs

SEATTLE, Aug. 17 (UPI)—Senator Walter F. Mondale, Jimmy Carter's Vice Presidential running mate, said today that 500,000 more Americans had been added to the unemployment rolls in the last three months.

Mr. Mondale, speaking to a convention of the Washington State Labor Council, said that the Ford Administration "says that employment is also up and that new people coming into the work force are pushing the statistics up."

"I don't think that is much of an answer," the Minnesota entry said. "And it's not the whole story. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in the last three months, employment in manufacturing has not risen. It has fallen by 42,000 jobs. Employment in construction has not risen. It has fallen by 39,000 jobs. Where are the new jobs the Ford Administration talks about?"

Mr. Mondale spoke to the labor leaders following a television interview in which he said that he and Mr. Carter had agreed to disagree if the occasion arises.

"We have agreed that if we disagree on an issue, we will say so," Mr. Mondale said. "We both have strong wills, but we are sure to be some disagreement."

A Team of Young Experts Aids Carter on Foreign Policy Plans

By LESLIE H. GELB
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—Jimmy Carter has named a team of young experts to develop and coordinate his positions on international issues and prepare for a possible Carter administration.

All aged in their 30's, from the northeast and from the liberal wing of the Democratic Party, they are now ensconced in Atlanta.

None of them is regarded as a contender for Cabinet posts in a Carter administration, and aides said that the former Georgia Governor continued to consult most closely with Prof. Zbigniew Brzezinski of Columbia University and Cyrus R. Vance, a New York lawyer with the firm of Simpson, Thatcher & Bartlett.

The new additions to Mr. Carter's staff are:

Richard Holbrooke, 35 years old, a former Foreign Service officer who is on leave from his post as managing editor of Foreign Policy magazine. He is responsible for current campaign issues involving foreign policy and defense.

Anthony Lake, 36, a former Foreign Service officer and White House aide to Henry A. Kissinger. His job is to work on plans for the future of the State Department, the Pentagon and the Central Intelligence Agency. He recently resigned as executive director of International Voluntary Services, a private organization similar to the Peace Corps.

Robert Ginsberg, a 33-year-old lawyer on leave from the New York firm of Cravath, Swain & Moore. He will be dealing with international economic affairs in the campaign.

Jerry J. Jasnowski, 37, an economist who served as a consultant to Senator Hubert H. Humphrey in his capacity as chairman of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee. He will focus mostly on domestic economic matters but work on international matters as well.

David Aaron, 35, a former Foreign Service officer and aide to Senator Walter F. Mondale. Mr. Carter's running mate. He works on issues for Mr. Carter and serves as a liaison man with Senator Mondale.

The Carter organization is divided into two overall policy groups. One is the national policy and issues staff, headed by Stuart Eizenstat, a 33-year-old Atlanta lawyer. This group deals with Mr. Carter's daily needs for speeches and briefing papers during the campaign.

Mr. Holbrooke, Mr. Jasnowski and Mr. Ginsberg work on this staff.

The other group is the policy committee, headed by Jack Watson, a 37-year-old Atlanta lawyer. This staff is responsible for preparing for a transition in administrations and developing proposals for reorganizing the Government, and for a talent hunt. Mr. Lake is on this staff.

Alfred Stern, Mr. Eizenstat's deputy on the issues staff, said in a telephone interview that foreign policy remained at the top of Mr. Carter's list of priorities, "but not higher than domestic economics."

Mr. Stern, a 33-year-old professor of the history of ideas on leave from Wayne State University in Detroit, has worked with Senator Humphrey in past years.

He said that Mr. Carter's list of possible topics for speeches on foreign affairs consisted of the world food problem, north-south relations and "ethics in international affairs." No speech on military spending is planned.

Mr. Stern said that Mr. Carter had no plans for further meetings with staff experts such as the ones he held in Plains, Ga., two weeks ago with senior defense and foreign affairs advisers or the one to be held this week with international economists. This is bound to increase the influence of Mr. Carter's own staff.

Mr. Carter also intends to keep his task forces of experts in operation throughout the campaign. One on foreign policy and defense includes such former high officials of the Johnson Administration as Clark M. Clifford, W. Averell Harriman, Paul C. Warnke, Harold Brown and Paul Nitze. The other, on nuclear disarmament, includes Herbert Scoville, a former arms control official, and Prof. Paul M. Doty Jr., chairman of the department of biochemistry at Harvard University.

Prof. Richard N. Cooper of Yale is said by members of the Carter camp to be a leading adviser on international economics.

Mr. Carter has carefully avoided naming anyone to head his task forces.

Lieutenant Governor Leads Early in Carolina Vote

By WAYNE KING
Special to The New York Times

RALEIGH, N.C., Aug. 17—Lieut. Gov. James B. Hunt took a strong lead over three major opponents in early returns for the Democratic nomination for Governor of North Carolina in primary voting today.

But initial figures did not indicate whether Mr. Hunt had won the more than 50 percent of the vote needed to avoid a runoff election next month.

The 39-year-old Mr. Hunt, a leader of the moderate progressive wing of the state Democratic party, held a substantial lead over his closest opponent, Edward M. O'Herron, 60, of Charlotte, the chairman of the board of Eckerd Drugs, Inc., who was backed by much of the state's business community, and George M. Wood, 50, a farmer who is a former legislator from the rural northeast section of the state. A fourth candidate, Thomas E. Strickland of Goldsboro, 46, a conservative state legislator, ran far behind.

David T. Flaherty, 47, a furniture manufacturing executive from Lenoir in the populous Piedmont, led Coy C. Privette, 43, of Kannapolis, a Baptist minister who became well-known in the state through his opposition of the sale of liquor by the drink. A third Republican candidate, Jake Alexander, 52, of Salisbury, former head of the State Department of Transportation, was trailing.

The vote for the Democrats, with 266 of 2,345 precincts reporting, was:

Hunt	37,331 (52%)
O'Herron	18,163 (25%)
Wood	13,265 (18%)

The vote for the Republicans, with 250 of 2,345 precincts reporting, was:

Flaherty	5,631 (52%)
Privette	2,982 (28%)
Alexander	1,793 (17%)

In the race for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor, Howard N. Lee, the former Mayor of Chapel Hill, who was the first black mayor of a predominantly white Southern town, appeared headed toward a runoff election on Sept. 14 with State Representative Jimmy Green, the Speaker of the House. Eight candidates were in the race, with Mr. Lee leading with 17,430 votes (29%) to Mr. Green's 14,438 (24%). The rest was well distributed among the other six candidates.

"The Democratic victor is given an excellent chance of reclaiming the statehouse for the Democrats. The Governorship was won by Republicans for the first time in this century in 1972 amid the landslide victory of former President Richard M. Nixon. The incumbent Republican, James E. Houshouser Jr., is prohibited by law from succeeding himself.

In their campaigns, the three leading Democratic candidates all attempted to link themselves with Jimmy Carter, the Democratic Presidential nominee.

Mr. Hunt, for example, issued campaign literature featuring a color photograph of himself with Mr. Carter, and said in a recent speech that he was proud of Mr. Carter because he is a Democrat, a Southerner and "because he's a man from a little town who knows something about roots and traditions. And he appealed to something else that people don't talk about much, that's human love."

Mr. O'Herron stressed his occupation as a businessman long outside formal politics, and even borrowed a favorite Carter line in his speeches: "I will never lie to you."

Mr. Wood told his campaign audiences, "This may be the year of the farmer," and has depicted himself, as Mr. Carter has, as a Southerner and a farmer pledged to reforming government. His television commercials were filmed by the same production crew that produced Mr. Carter's.

Mr. Wood, however, was explicit in some of his Governmental positions, expressing opposition to the death penalty, calling for a constitutional convention to reform state government, and advocating excluding food items from the state's 3 percent sales tax. He also advocated increasing corporate income taxes and those levied on the wealthy.

Mr. Hunt, who ran a well-organized, well-financed campaign, attempted to avoid the label of "liberal," still a liability in North Carolina races, and has thus come out strongly against crime and Government waste. He advocated improved education in public schools, particularly the teaching of reading, and said he wanted to be known as an "education governor."

Mr. O'Herron, who, although a Democrat, contributed $1,000 to the Nixon campaign in 1972, and $3,800 to Republican Senator Jesse A. Helms, an arch-conservative, stressed improvement of the state's economic climate, particularly the attraction of new industry.

MRS. ABZUG URGES 'RESOURCES BANKS'

Says U.S. Could Use Them to Finance New Industries

By THOMAS P. RONAN

Representative Bella S. Abzug suggested yesterday that the Federal Government establish "regional resources banks" to help create and finance new industries.

These industries, she said in an interview on the WOR-TV "Public Affairs" program, could stimulate new jobs and help improve the quality of life. She pointed to the Northeast, where there are many unemployed workers.

Mrs. Abzug was endorsed in her campaign for the Democratic nomination for the Senate by the New Democratic Club of Co-op City, the Bronx housing complex.

Abraham Hirschfeld, a businessman who also seeks the United States Steel Company for raising some of its prices, and urged President Ford to bar such increases, saying, they would have a serious inflationary effect.

Other Aspirants

A Citizens Committee backing City Council President Paul O'Dwyer for the nomination, praised him in a letter seeking support and funds, for having been "in the vanguard of the fight for freedom and justice wherever the forces of fascism, racism, bigotry and economic exploitation posed a threat."

The committee is headed by the playwright Lillian Hellman and Gerard Piel, publisher of Tall Ships Bicentennial visit.

Scientific American magazine, Ramsey Clark, a former United States Attorney General and another aspirant for the nomination, announced yesterday that he had been endorsed by Theodore Sorensen. Both were advisers to President John F. Kennedy.

Daniel P. Moynihan, former United States representative at the United Nations, who is also seeking the Senate nomination, attended a fund-raising breakfast at Las Vegas, Nev., yesterday.

Cost of Tall Ships Visit

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 17 (UPI)—City Manager Paul Steinbrenner has sent Gov. Philip W. Noel a bill for $59,645, requesting that the state reimburse Newport for services it provided during the Tall Ships Bicentennial visit.

Ford Widens His Lead Over Reagan As Californian Mounts Final Challenge

Sears, the former Governor's chief strategist, said that tonight might be "one of the most important in American political history."

Kansas City, appearing before the convention floor—Mary Masterson, from Casper, and Sam Kelly, a petroleum products distributor from Rawlins.

Mr. Reagan gained only Dr. Toote and H. Davidson Osgood Jr. of Portland, Me., the only uncommitted delegate in New England.

Working almost nonstop, Mr. Reagan argued before one delegate that only his nomination could deprive the Democrats of the Watergate issue.

But the conservative Californian was able to produce, at a news conference called to demonstrate "tangible evidence of movement toward my candidacy," only one new commitment—that of Dr. Gloria E. A. Toote of Manhattan.

Although Mr. Sears has been insisting for months that Mr. Reagan has 1,140 votes, Mr. Laxalt said that the former California Governor's hard count was 1,090 to 1,100.

2 to Make Nominations
Mr. Ford announced that Gov. William G. Milliken of Michigan, his home state, would nominate him tomorrow evening.

Mr. Ford reached his goal of 1,130, a convention majority, about 10 o'clock last night, according to the tabulation maintained for six months by The Times.

Advisers to Mr. Ford were pressing the argument that in the first instance he should choose someone relatively noncontroversial, such as Mr. Baker, and in the second, someone dramatic, such as Mr. Ruckelshaus.

A Parade for Ford
This morning, a steady line of uncommitted delegates began marching into the President's camp.

Mr. Reagan continued to deary any interest whatsoever in the job. One of his old friends supplied today a theory as to the basic reason.

Poll Shows Carter Lead
MURON S. D., Aug. 17 (UPI)—A South Dakota Farmers Union poll, conducted at two fairs, showed today that Jimmy Carter has a 2-to-1 lead over either President Ford or Ronald Reagan in South Dakota.

Risk to Ford Involved
The proposal was also one that would force the President to announce his choice a full day earlier than he would prefer and would involve a risk in this closely divided convention that his selection could cost him some delegate votes.

More Strategic Task
Mr. Carter is bound to lose strength now that he will finally face a single opponent, they argue, and either the President, from the pulpit of the White House, or Mr. Reagan, with the glamor of Hollywood, will enunciate the agreed and uncontested Republican promise of less government, reduced spending and freedom from Federal taxation and control.

Reagan and Ford Command Post Leaders

Anderson Carter Frederick Clifton White

By JOSEPH LELYVELD

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 17—About a year ago, when Ronald Reagan's campaign for the Republican nomination was still in its gestation stage, Anderson Carter identified to his political mentor and the good friend, F. Clifton White, that he had made up his mind to work for the Californian. Mr. White told him it was a hopeless cause, that an incumbent President simply could not be denied his party's nomination. "Clif," Mr. Carter recalls saying, "we may not win but it's going to be close enough to make it an interesting year. Tomorrow, when the vote on the nomination is finally taken, the two friends will be at the controls in the opposing command posts that have been set up in trailers at the Kemper Arena. Mr. Carter, who has had to become inured in recent months to bad jokes about his surname, concedes that there is a close resemblance between the trailer Mr. White designed for Barry Goldwater at the 1964 convention and the setup he has chosen for this year's Reagan Trailer, where he is ensconced side by side with John Sears, the campaign manager and master strategist.

Big, friendly, tough

Technological "Overkill" Their essential instrument for reaching their troops on the floor is still the telephone. Mr. White has taken a technological leap forward and his phones are said to be augmented with walkie-talkies, but Mr. Carter tells that "overkill." He does not expect to beat his opponent with swifter communications or to outsmart him. "I'm sure Clif's smarter than I am," he says, but that is the last concession he makes. The crucial advantage on his side, Mr. Carter says, is that he has been studying the delegates longer and harder than Mr. White, who has only lately taken a leading role in the Ford operation. "I don't have to push the buttons on a computer to find out how the delegates feel," he boasts. A big 48-year-old man, Mr. Carter easily fits the stereotype of a bluff Western Rancher, which is what he is when he goes home, between political campaigns, to Lovington, N. M. "He's a genuine gem of the West," says Frank Wheistone of Cul Bank, Mont., who first worked with Mr. Carter in the Goldwater campaign. "It's big, friendly and tough."

By JAMES T. WOOTEN

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 17—It wasn't as glamorous as he had thought it would be. F. Clifton White was 30 years old when he boarded a train in New York and went down to Philadelphia to attend his first Republican National Convention—and he could hardly believe his good fortune at having been assigned to something called the "communications team" of the leading Presidential contender, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York. But throughout the 1948 sessions, the young man sat discretely in a tiny telephone booth just off the convention floor in the Municipal Auditorium there, holding open a line to Mr. Dewey's suite in the Bellevue Stratford hotel. "Just me and a handful of nickles," he recalled today as he looked back on a career that has brought him now to a long bank of modern phones in a sleek trailer parked out behind the Kemper Arena here.

A consummate tactician

There tonight and tomorrow night, far from the delegates on the floor of this year's Republican convention, Mr. White is running the "communications team" for President Ford's campaign. "So you can see I really haven't come too far since 1948," he said. But in the 28 years since Mr. Dewey won the nomination and lost the election, Mr. White has become one of the country's consummate political tacticians, working deftly and skillfully for Dwight D. Eisenhower, Richard M. Nixon and other Republican candidates at various levels of the electoral process. Aided Goldwater Victory More than any other person, he is credited with Senator Barry Goldwater's startling capture of the party's Presidential nomination in 1964. In 1970, his performance as the architect of James L. Buckley's election to the Senate from New York led directly to a job in 1972 as a consultant to the Committee for the Re-election of the President. And this week, Mr. White is once again at the very core of another convention struggle as he directs a staff of about 15 people whose primary task is to know precisely what is happening at any given moment on the convention floor.

Perched behind an omnibus phone which allows him to talk with "regional whips" on the floor, with President Ford in his suite or officials at the Ford campaign headquarters at the Crown Center hotel, or with any of dozens of other strategists—or all of them at once—the 58-year-old native of Leonardsville, N.Y., is playing one of the most important roles in the contest between Mr. Ford and Ronald Reagan. Asked if his operations tonight, during votes on platform and rules procedures, might be a

Ford and Carter Are Asked to Speak at Legion Parley

SEATTLE, Aug. 17 (AP)—President Ford and the Democratic Presidential nominee, Jimmy Carter, have been invited to address the 55th annual national convention of the America Legion, which is expected to attract 25,000 people to the Seattle area beginning Friday. A Ford spokesman said yesterday that the President would probably not attend, but Mr. Carter's visit is considered certain. A Legion spokesman said that although Mr. Ford's visit was in doubt, officials were not getting involved in the abortion debate for fear Mr. Carter may address the issue with his opening session or possibly in a concurrent session. If Ronald Reagan wins the Republican nomination, he may address the convention.

boomed from the floor and galleries by delegates, who clearly realized the significance of the procedural struggle. The Regan backers sought adoption of the rule change in the hope that they might move on tomorrow to chip more votes from the very slender majority that President Ford appears to enjoy and deny him a first-ballot victory. Earlier a complete set of new Republican rules that are likely to make party reform even more difficult to achieve was submitted to the convention. Under the new code, continuing review of the way the party runs its conventions and picks its national candidates will be assigned to members of the Republican National Committee, rather than to the present composite group of elected officials and party professionals. The convention's Rules Committee rejected yesterday, 54 to 42, a proposal to continue the broader party reform committee that has operated since 1972. Instead, it created a new 54-member group on rule changes consisting entirely of members of the National Committee.

The new rules also freeze with only minor changes, the plan under which the relative strength of the states in the nominating convention is determined and continue to limit the role of women in party affairs. Two Key Areas The focus of attention tonight was on two areas of the party rules that might affect the nomination contest between President Ford and Ronald Reagan: new proposals for selecting Vice-Presidential candidates and for binding convention delegates from primary states to vote according to state law. But the great majority of the rules submitted to the delegates, which will control party operations long after the convention and the 1976 election are over, demonstrate the prevailing insistence of conservative leaders that Republicans continue to rely on the old methods that brought them to power.

Representative William A. Steiger of Wisconsin, chairman of the present Rules Review Committee, pleaded with the convention rules group to retain a committee with Governors, members of Congress and political scientists as its members, as well as those serving on the party's National Committee. Generally, National Committee members are older men and women—some of them party professionals and others fund-raisers or contributors. They tend to be more conservative and more responsive to the active party leadership than are elective officials and working politicians. The "Republican formula" under which the convention strength is apportioned among the states remains essentially unchanged. It still gives the smaller states greater proportional influence in the party than either their population or their share of the Republican

Reagan Says Heredity Keeps Gray From Hair

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 17 (UP)—Ronald Reagan says it is heredity, and not hair dye, that keeps him from turning gray. A Virginia delegate asked the 65-year-old former California Governor yesterday if he had a "secret diet" that kept his hair showing stands of gray. Mr. Reagan laughed and said that "some members of the press have gone so far as to get snippings" of his hair and subject them to chemical analysis to see if he used a hair dye—as he has repeatedly denied. "I guess I owe it to my ancestry," he said. "My father had a full head of hair and [it] was not gray. I can say the same for my brother. No, I don't have any special diet."

The Background
The current dispute began when an Academy instructor in Electrical Engineering Course 304 noticed the words "I received help" scrawled on the bottom of one of the 823 test papers turned in by junior-class students just before the spring vacation.

Academy officials denied this at first, but later agreed to a more widespread inquiry. All the test papers were put into a computer to detect similarities. As a result, 123 more cadets were accused.

Officially operated by the cadets themselves, the West Point code is administered, nevertheless, under the influence of Academy officials and its operation is passed along informally from class to class.

The Academy's View
The Academy has rejected allegations of a cover-up, saying it re-examined the test papers, established the test view panels, expanded to facilitate the growing investigation and brought in 50 extra Army lawyers to help handle the new cases.

There are real and significant needs for an honor code, they say. Officers bear heavy responsibilities, and thus strict adherence to professional, ethical and moral codes are as essential to them as they are to doctors and lawyers.

Charges Dismissed
Academy officials say they have investigated allegations of honor code abuse and found few charges that could be sustained. Lieut. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, has the duty to review convictions. He has dismissed accusations and reversed guilty verdicts.

The Outlook
The investigation and prosecution of cadets may continue beyond the Labor Day deadline that the Academy had informally set for itself, extending into the new academic year and creating new administrative headaches.

Pressure Mounting for More Candid Data for College Students

By EDWARD B. FISKE
College catalogues traditionally include basic information about courses, tuition and admission requirements. They do not, however, normally include types of factual data—such as the success rates that have in obtaining prospective students in which college to at-they moved to improve the information they provide students in financial and other areas. Officials elsewhere are taking similar steps.

In the State of Washington, the Council for Postsecondary Education has urged colleges to include in their catalogues figures on the number of qualified applicants who are accepted and the placement experience of recent graduates.
A 16-member National Task Force on Better Information for Student Choice, supported by the federally backed Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education, is midway through a two-year study of the information needs of college students.
Senator Jacob K. Javits, Republican of New York, has proposed an amendment to the higher education legislation now pending in Congress that would make improved "consumer information" mandatory for institutions receiving Federal funds.
Although faculty members and students have been actively involved in the general consumer movement, it is only relatively recently that the colleges themselves have come under fire. The best-known case is that of Ilegnanniello, a teacher who is suing the University of Bridgeport for a tuition refund on the ground that she did not learn what was promised in a graduate education course.

The new concern for the rights of students has been fostered by growing numbers of students involved in some form of higher education, rising tuition levels, the fact that an increasing percentage of them are older and more experienced, growing student anxiety about employment and indications that, as the birth rate declines, higher education is becoming a "buyer's market."
The major incentive in the movement to develop better information for prospective students has come from the growing Federal involvement in grants, loans and work-study subsidies to individual students. As Elaine El-Khawas, a staff associate at the American Council on Education, put it, "The Federal Government now has a direct stake in what happens to students."
This new Federal interest in students' well-being was reflected by legislation two years ago that required institutions with students receiving Federal loans to adopt policies of giving pro-rated tuition refunds to students who withdraw up to halfway through a semester. Some institutions have had policies of not granting refunds at all once the semester begins.
The new demands for improved information embrace several distinct areas, beginning with finances. Proponents say that college catalogues should include detailed information on scholarship policies—not simply a declaration that "financial aid is available"—and include indications of whether students can save money by completing their course of study in less than four years.

Layton Olson, director of the National Student Educational Fund, which is pushing for such changes, suggested that colleges should interview graduates and publish their remarks on which parts of their program they had found helpful or useless. "It may be that the Federal or state governments will have to do this follow-up," he said.
Joan S. Stark, a member of the faculty of Syracuse University who serves on the National Task Force, suggests that colleges should also make clear their policies in regard to tuition and fee changes, transcript services, course cancellation and related matters and then be held accountable.
Relying on "Good Faith"
"Despite the fact that the courts have traditionally viewed the catalogue as a contract entered into by enrollment, students are asked to rely entirely on the good faith of the institution for an extremely expensive and significant transaction," she recently wrote.

Thus far little opposition has been expressed to the pressure for more complete information, presumably because little formal pressure has been applied.
At a time when college presidents are increasingly vocal about what they regard as unnecessary Federal intrusion into the internal operations of colleges, though, such opposition is likely to develop.
The United States Office of Education has awarded more than $2.5 million in grants to 90 colleges, universities, school districts and citizens groups to develop and implement environmental education programs during the 1976-77 academic year. Two awards went to New York City: one for $200,000 to the Mount Sinai School of Medicine and another for $46,396 to the National Urban League.
Other grants went to groups in Amityville, L.I., Buffalo, New Rochelle and Pojsdam.
A plan by the Westchester County school district of Rye Neck, which is partly in Rye and partly in Mamaroneck, to replace principals with teacher "team leaders" to save money has received only partial approval from the State Education Department. At the elementary school, the feared principal, who was head of the local administrator's union, objected, and was upheld by the state. But the secondary school was allowed to keep the principal's job vacant.

Dr. DiMazio Is Cleared For City Medical Post
Nicholas Scopetta, the city's Commissioner of Investigation, yesterday advised the Mayor's office that he saw no obstacles to the appointment of Dr. Dominick J. DiMazio as Chief Medical Examiner, a post Dr. DiMazio had filled in an acting capacity during the retirement of Dr. Milton Happers in December 1975.
Dr. DiMazio emerged as the front-runner for the post from a Civil Service list last spring, but a decision was held up until suggestions that he might have acted improperly in accepting payment for collating a series of statistics from his office for a California research group.
A spokesman for the Mayor's office said that the findings of Mr. Scopetta's investigation into the matter had been conveyed by telephone and that a full written report was expected within a day or two.

Court Rules That City College Used Reverse Bias in '74 Plan

By ARNOLD H. LUBASCH
A Federal judge said yesterday that the City College of New York had used "intentional racial discrimination" to increase the number of blacks and Puerto Ricans who had been accepted for a special program to train students to become doctors.
The judge, Marvin E. Frankel, ruled in District Court in Manhattan that whites and Asians had been discriminated against when the college selected students in 1974 for the biomedical education program.
The program, which began in 1973, consists of four years of liberal arts courses and intensive science training at City College leading to a bachelor of science degree, plus two years of clinical education at a medical school leading to a medical degree.
After the judge's decision, spokesmen for the city and the college said that the students who had allegedly been kept out because of "reverse discrimination" had later been invited to join the program and that the admission procedures were now "more objective."
Judge Frankel found that 19 whites and Asians had been "intentionally eliminated on the basis of race" from a list of 94 students selected for admission in 1974. That alternative selections had been made "on the basis of race" and that a "50 percent quota for blacks and Hispanics" had been a goal used in making the selection list.
In his 58-page decision, he stressed that the discriminatory process had violated the policy of the City University and the equal-protection clause of the Constitution.
The judge said additional court proceedings would be needed to determine if the city and college officials were liable for damages and how much might be paid to students who had suffered from the discrimination.
Victor J. Herwitz, a lawyer for the students who filed suit, complained of the discrimination of about 25 students could be entitled to at least $17,000 in damages for each year of delay in the student's medical education.
Mr. Herwitz said he would also seek $75,000 from the city and college officials for legal fees in the case, which was filed in the Anti-Discrimination League of B'nai B'rith.
Larry Lavy, chairman of the league's national law committee, added, "We hope the outcome of this case will serve as a signal to all institutions of higher education that racial discrimination in any form cannot be tolerated."
Judge Frankel said in his decision that City College had violated due process of the law when it had "deviated from university policy" and had discriminated by eliminating "only minority students" from the list of students found qualified for admission in 1974.

"ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FIT TO PRINT"

In October, 1896, Publisher Adolph S. Ochs and the editors of The New York Times condensed their news policy into these seven words.

At the same time, Mr. Ochs offered a prize of $100 to anyone who could come up with a better slogan of 10 words or less.

Thousands of Times readers submitted slogans like "All the News That's Fit to Read," "All the News Worth Telling," "Free From Filth, Full of News," "News for the Million, Scandal for None."

The prize winner, selected by Richard Watson Gilder, editor of Century Magazine, was "All the World News, but Not a School for Scandal." It was submitted by D. M. Redfield of New Haven, Conn.

When the contest was over, however, the original "All the News That's Fit to Print" seemed more appropriate than ever. On February 10, 1897, it was placed on the first page of The New York Times in the same spot it occupies today.

The world has changed since 1897. So has The New York Times. But the policy behind the slogan is still the same. Day in, day out "All the News That's Fit to Print" helps you keep up with a modern, changing world.

Is Baseball Pondering Altering League Lineups?

By LEONARD KOPPELT Special to The New York Times LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17—A radical suggestion is making the rounds of baseball's inner circles: let the Houston Astros and the newly-formed Toronto Bluejays switch leagues.

such a switch, even if it were found desirable, in time for the 1977 season. So the real speculation is about letting the projected expansion go through, and then switching a year later.

It has had high attendance only while the Astrodome had novelty value in the late 1960's. A switch to the American League, therefore, might be a shot in the arm to the Houston franchise in general.

Day at the Races: Track Is Fast but Pigeons Are Slow

By STEVE CADY

Never turn a fun-loving pigeon loose in New York City without a chapman.

There's just too much to see and do here, even for feathered promoters trained to show the world how close the new Meadowlands Sports Complex is to midtown Manhattan.

This became apparent yesterday an hour after 10 young racing pigeons fluttered off the 86th-floor Observation Deck of the Empire State Building for what should have been, at most, a 10-minute flight across the Hudson River to East Rutherford, N.J.

The $300 million complex, where harness racing begins Sept. 1 and the Giants play their home pro-football opener on Oct. 10, is six miles from Manhattan. On a day of sparkling sunshine, both the 76,000-seat stadium and the one-mile race track were clearly visible from the Empire State Building.

But the pigeons weren't interested. Led by a "red checker" that took off from the No. 2 post position, they wheeled south, made a swing around the building and headed uptown toward Central Park, losing altitude steadily.

At 12:07 P.M., an hour after Authority Terminal would take only 16 minutes.

"We're doing this," Krumpke said, "to demonstrate just how close we are to midtown New York."

By 12:30 P.M., the pigeons still hadn't reached home. Form players were surprised, because one of the birds had made the same trip two weeks ago on a foggy day in 5 minutes 40 seconds. Another of the 2-month-old racers was a royally bred son of Golden Boy, the second-place finisher in the 1974 One Bird Derby, a 500-mile test that corresponds to thoroughbred racing's Kentucky Derby.

But George Woertz, manager of yesterday's race, and Ralph Serpi, president of the 13-club Northern New Jersey Combine, weren't surprised at the reluctance of their pigeons to go home.

"Being that they're young," said Serpi, "they fool around. It's such a nice day, they're being joyous. Just flying around and enjoying the sights."

The way Woertz talked, this was a case of sprinters turning into routers as a result of the ideal weather conditions. "If they were older or if it take-off, the race-result phone line to the home coop near the new track's tote board reported only one stray seagull in the vicinity.

"Nothing in sight," the spotter said.

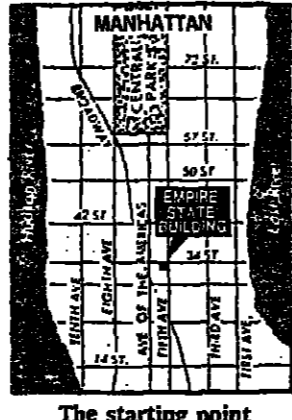

Had the pigeons been mugged by a hawk in Central Park? Found some friends on the steps of the Public Library? Been accosted on Eighth Avenue? Gone to Saratoga?

"Maybe they didn't have money for the bridge tolls," somebody said.

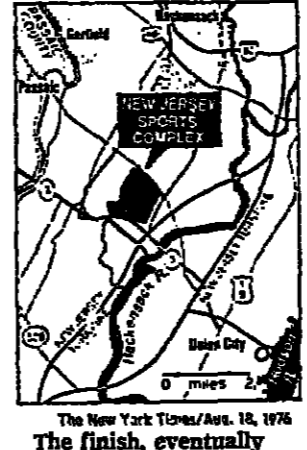

Jack Krumpke, executive director of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, said he didn't know much about pigeons. But he said he knew the bus ride to the track from the Port

An hour and 40 minutes later, some of the birds finally found the race track, behind the football stadium, at the Meadowlands Sports Complex, a mere six miles—as the crow, not the pigeon, flies—from Manhattan.

By MURRAY CHASS Oscar Gamble knelt in the on-deck circle. He was to be the second batter in the ninth inning of a 1-1 game and it was very likely that he wanted the chance to bat.

Boggs fired his first pitch of the inning, a fastball, and Nettles swung. The hit, a towering fly would certainly clear the right-field fence.

Bridge: Pender's Team Impressive In Springold Knockout Play

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

One of the most popular teams in the recent Spingold Knockout Championships in Salt Lake City was a foursome composed of Peter Pender of San Francisco, Harlow Lewis of Wynnewood, Pa., Eric Kokish and Peter Nagy of Montreal. Their impeccable deportment might have served as a model for some other experts, and their performance was on an equally high level. They defeated a series of strong teams to reach the semifinal, and were somewhat unfortunate not to go further.

and led a heart. If he had been allowed to steal a trick in this suit, he would have been able to drive out the spade ace, draw trumps, and score 10 tricks. But Nagy, alertly put up his ace and played another diamond, forcing dummy to ruff. The winning defense required West to take his red aces quickly and his spade ace slowly. When the spade king was led from dummy, it was allowed to win. The position was now this:

In the last few deals of a semifinal match that was hanging in the balance, Nagy came up with a perfect defense on the diagramed deal to defeat a game contract. He had opened the West hand with one no-trump, and heard North make a Landy bid of two clubs, promising both major suits.

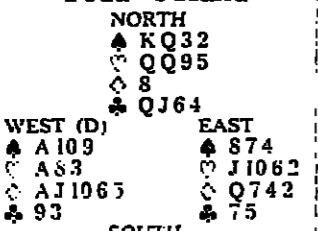

This gave South a problem, and he solved it with an invitation jump to three spades. He hoped to find a three-five spade fit, but had to struggle in a three-four fit when his partner accepted the invitation.

Diamond Ace Led

Against routine defense, West would not have been able to score more than his three aces, but Nagy got off to a good start by leading the diamond ace. This presented South with a diamond trick, but prepared the way for an attack on the declarer's precarious control of the trump suit.

The diamond jack was led at the second trick, and South won with the king.

Today's Hand

Neither side was vulnerable. The bidding:

West 1 N.T. 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

North 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♠ Pass

East 3 ♠ Pass

South 3 ♠ Pass

West led the diamond ace.

20,000 Veterans Stage Night Parade

By PRANAY GUPTA

More than 20,000 war veterans waving flags and marching to martial music paraded down Fifth Avenue last night in celebration of their national convention in New York City this week.

Their parade, watched by thousands of spectators between 95th and 64th Streets — the route of the march — was preceded by several hours of discussion and debate at the New York Hilton Hotel on such issues as improving benefits for veterans and such questions as whether the nation's politicians have paid sufficient attention to veterans' problems.

Mrs. Conn Is Wed To Reyner Samet

Gertrude Levy Conn of Hampton, Va., widow of Ellis Conn, was married yesterday morning to L. Reyner Samet of New York, where the bridegroom practices law. Rabbi Sherman P. Kirschner performed the ceremony at the Cascades Waterfalls restaurant, part of the Williamsburg (Va.) Restoration.

The bride, whose first husband was an appliance merchant in Newport News, Va., is a graduate of Longwood College in Farmville, Va. She is the daughter of Celia Reyner Levy of Newport News and the late Harry Levy. Her mother is Mr. Samet's aunt.

The bridegroom's first wife, to whom he had been married for 41 years, died this year. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Samet of Newport News. An alumnus of the University of Virginia, where he also received his law degrees, he is counsel to the New York firm of Becker & London.

York Hilton Hotel on such issues as improving benefits for veterans and such questions as whether the nation's politicians have paid sufficient attention to veterans' problems.

But although the parade, which was reviewed by Mayor Beame from a grandstand on Fifth Avenue and 64th Street, was cheered by viewers, it also drew protests last night from residents of buildings along Fifth Avenue who complained to the police that the event was too noisy.

Earlier, the nearly unanimous agreement among the 40,000 veterans who gathered for the veterans of Foreign Wars convention was that the nation's veterans needed better medical and pension benefits and that the nation's politicians needed to pay more attention to veterans' problems.

The delegates passed numerous resolutions yesterday urging President Ford and the Congress to act to insure better monetary and medical benefits for veterans. To highlight their position that national politicians needed to take a firmer stand on veterans' affairs, delegates sent a telegram to Jimmy Carter, the Democratic Presidential nominee, asking him to appear before them and outline his views on the subject.

The telegram "was more than an invitation, however. Signed by Thomas C. Walker, head of the 1.8 million-member V.F.W., it accused the former Georgia governor of "callous disregard toward those who fought for their country and of wanting to pardon those who ran away" from the Vietnam war. Mr. Carter, through a spokesman, informed the veterans that he appreciated the invitation, but that he would not be able to appear before them because of prior engagements. But he took issue with the accusations of Mr. Walker and noted that throughout his primary campaign he had referred "repeatedly to Vietnam era veterans as the most unsung heroes in our history."

Beth Gettenberg Wed To Sandy Herskowitz

Beth Gettenberg and Sandy Herskowitz were married yesterday evening at the Sands Beach Club in Atlantic Beach, L.I., by Rabbi Yaakov Kaminitzky and Ralph Pelcovitz.

The parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Gettenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin J. Herskowitz, all of Far Rockaway, Queens. Mr. Gettenberg is a lawyer and a certified public accountant. The bride's mother is a teacher in New York.

The bridegroom's father is president and chairman of the Marnay Sales and Manufacturing Company, an office furniture equipment concern.

The bride, a Barnard College alumna, and her husband, a magna cum laude graduate of Queens College, are students at the New York Law School.

Books of The Times

But Writing About It Does

By ANATOLE BROYARD

WHERE THE MONEY WAS. By Willie Sutton with Edward Linn, 339 pages, Viking, $10. Someone asked Willie Sutton, America's most famous bank robber, why he had chosen this particular way of making a living. "Because I loved it," Mr. Sutton said. "I was more alive when I was inside a bank robbing it than at any other time in my life." He loved the planning, which to him was like a chess game, and he delighted in the theatrics that he made a part of his technique. He wore various uniforms, dyed his hair several different colors, pasted on a wide range of mustaches, stuffed corks up his nose, thickened his eyebrows with additional hair, used elevator shoes to alter his height and even occasionally affected a lisp or accent.

While he does not say so in "Where the Money Was," Willie Sutton was also a prankster who enjoyed turning the tables on a society in which he had grown up with very little on the family table. His bank robberies, and his equally famous escapes from "foolproof" prisons, had something of the flavor of the satirist about them.

Theft as an Occupation

Calling himself a professional thief, Mr. Sutton explains that "a professional thief is a man who wakes up every morning thinking about committing a crime the same way another man gets up and goes to his job." We realize what a commitment he had to his occupation when we learn he broke into nearly 100 banks, quite apart from his jewelry store heists. Not all of the banks resisted the time and ingenuity he put into robbing them. As he puts it, some of them were "artistic successes but commercial disappointments."

Willie Sutton's technique in "taking" a bank was based on intensive observation and an extraordinary ability to use the facts he gathered to compose a natural and economic scenario. He rarely brought a bank to a standstill in order to rob it. Usually he simply inserted himself and his accomplices into the ebb and flow of activity which was their best cover. Once, when some painters arrived in the middle of one of his jobs, he ordered them not to stand against the wall with their hands raised or to lie on the floor, but to start painting. To forestall any heroic attempts at resistance, he would assure the customers in the place that it was not their money that was being stolen but the bank's. They stood to lose nothing. While the author carried a gun as a part of his theatrical equipment, he never believed in violence. Psychology, he says, was his most effective weapon. "Professional thieves pride themselves on not having to use violence," he explains. "By your manner, voice and timing—as well as your gun—you should be able to immobilize the victim psychologically."

The catch in "Where the Money Was" lies in what Willie Sutton does not say. If he was most alive while robbing a bank, it follows that he was less alive at all other times. He never mentions what it is like to live always on the lam, always apprehensive over being caught. The reader does not get much sense of the joy of life in these pages. With all the money he stole, Willie Sutton did not seem to buy much happiness.

"My modus operandi was so distinctive," he writes, "I might just as well have been leaving my calling card behind." Every time he left his calling card behind, the newspapers ran a picture of him, and it was this celebrity that was his undoing. Even with all his disguises, and a nose job as well, he was recognized several times, captured and convicted. And as happy as he was robbing banks, he could not fail to be equally unhappy in jail. When he began serving his time, prisons had not yet been reformed and he suffered especially severe treatment after his first escape from a "foolproof" prison.

He was isolated in solitary confinement and out of it, because each time he escaped—three in all—it was a blot on the warden's record, as well as on the official's self-esteem. Some readers may find Mr. Sutton's escapes more interesting than his robberies. The planning seems even more elaborate and the cooperation among the men in jail, the securing of information and materials through the underground, are even more impressive than in the case of the bank robberies.

In Mr. Sutton's first escape, he used a blanket and pillow to fake a sleeping man in his bed, in order to delay the discovery of his escape, but in his later attempts he was watched so closely that much more sophisticated means had to be found. His "face" had to be visible, for the guards would enter his cell and investigate even if he pulled the blanket over his head. By coincidence, the author had taken up painting in prison to pass the time. In one escape attempt, he built a plaster cast and painted his features on it, even to the prison pallor through which his veins showed, and the lines of age. From the prison barber, he got and saved enough hair to create a full head of hair, eyebrows and eyelashes. As a final touch, he added a plaster cast of his hand and forearm lying outside of the blanket. This dummy was hidden in a cache under the floor. But it was all for nothing: A day or two before his planned escape, several other prisoners were caught in an abortive attempt, and this resulted in an intensive search that turned up Mr. Sutton's dummy and sent him back to solitary.

Last Escape the Most Brilliant

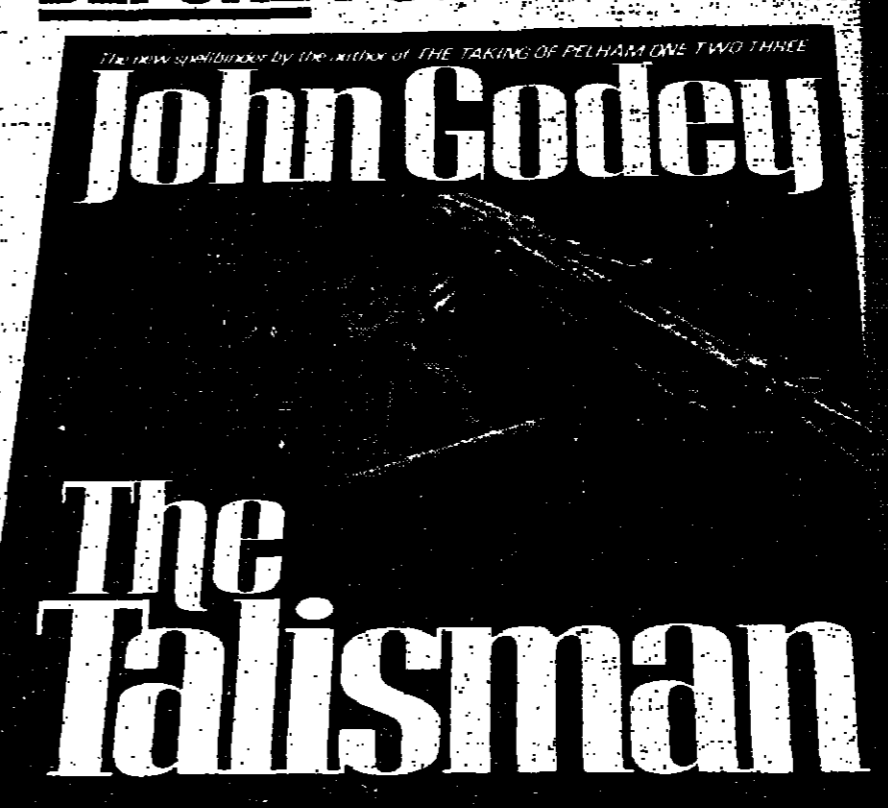

Perhaps the most brilliant escape of all was the legal battle the author fought with the help of a young woman lawyer. Condemned to serve more than 100 years, Mr. Sutton beat the rap by attacking not the prison walls, but the procedures that had put him inside them. In 1969, he was finally freed on parole, on the grounds that he had been too heavily sentenced and had already served out enough time.

While living by his wits enabled him to steal millions of dollars, Mr. Sutton is not conspicuously witty in "Where the Money Was." What he and Edward Linn, a very capable writer who worked with him on the book, have turned out is a rather homely but readable story. Perhaps it seems more ordinary than it really is because we have all been exposed to the hyped-up images of television crime series and the new wave of crime movies, in which the crime is difficult to distinguish from the psychedelic. Even with these reservations, though, Mr. Sutton will probably prove to be correct when he says of his "very moral book" that "the message it imparts is that crime doesn't pay... but writing about it does."

In Which Mr. Buckley and Mr. Cohen Discuss Principles

By James L. Buckley

By William S. Cohen

In 1959, Abraham Lincoln stood before members of the young Republican Party in Chicago and said:

"If we do not allow ourselves to be allured from the strict path of our duty by such device as shifting our ground . . . then the future of the Republican cause is safe . . . Stand by your principles . . . and victory, complete and permanent is sure at last."

Lincoln's message was clear. Only a consistent commitment to principle can attract the converts needed to assure a new party's ultimate success. And today, only a commitment to clearly defined principles can stem the Republican Party's decline.

Most Americans find themselves divided on the issues into one or another camp, each representing a reasonably consistent political perspective. One camp leans toward the left, and the other—the larger—leans toward the right. If the Republican Party is to recapture its place in the sun, it must move to pre-empt its logical constituency; and this it can do only by identifying its principles and priorities with those of its natural allies. This will require more than just talking about principles. They must be defined, made plausible; the nation made to understand why Republicans can be trusted to apply these principles in building the kind of society most Americans still want.

What are these principles? What are the underlying philosophical threads that can bind the Republican Party to its natural constituency? I would suggest a few propositions on which most Republicans and, I believe, a majority of Americans could agree:

1. The basic purpose of government in a free society is to protect the lives and liberty of its citizens. It is thus the government's duty to bring crime under effective control and to prevent a concentration of public or private power at the expense of the individual.
2. Citizens rightly expect the value of their incomes and savings to be protected. To accomplish this the government must protect the value of its currency by avoiding fiscal and monetary policies that create inflation. In short, government must learn to live within its income.
3. Our free enterprise system, operating in freedom and unbacked by over-regulation, is the system best designed to create the jobs we need and to assure the highest standard of living for the greatest number.
4. Our commitment to the proposition that all men are created equal is a commitment to the equal dignity and equal rights of each American as an individual, not as a member of one sex or of one class.
5. It is within the family that char-

WASHINGTON—There is a certain "mad hatter" quality to Presidential politics this year. Indeed, anyone who has followed the political trail knows the experience of walking through a maze of mirrors where reality cannot be distinguished from reflection and where the multiplication of reflection produces disorientation and confusion.

For the first time in a generation, the American people are taking to heart the traditional political message of the Republican Party: the need for deregulation of our economy, the need to cut Government red tape and reduce our burgeoning Federal bureaucracy, the importance of preserving individual initiative and human rights in a technologically complex society. And yet, as the Republicans meet this week in Kansas City, we find our Presidential contenders trailing 2 to 1 in the polls behind a former governor of Georgia, whose very success among Democrats is attributable to his skill in sounding rather Republican, or at least acceptably conservative.

If imitation is, indeed, a form of flattery, Republicans perhaps should be flattered. But I think we should instead be concerned about what this development says about the inability of the Republican Party to communicate its message effectively to the voters, and why some political observers are predicting that it is headed, like some aging pachyderm, to its final resting place in Kansas City.

Theoretically, Republicans should be the beneficiaries of the American people's alarm over the staggering budget deficits incurred by Congress and the runaway inflation that has consumed earnings and savings. Yet Democratic leaders glibly dismiss their failures and excesses as being errors of the heart, springing from an abundance of charity. Even though the landscape is littered with the broken promises and shattered expectations of the Great Society programs, the Democratic Party is still portrayed as "the party of the people" and the Republicans as protectors of the powerful and the privileged.

Several factors foster this notion. The vast majority of people perceive, however unfairly, Republicans as being inconsistent in the application of their principles and insensitive to the social issues that touch their lives—preferring to clutch old slogans which, although ideologically pure, may no longer be relevant to contemporary social and economic problems.

For example, it seems inconsistent to herald the virtues of the free enterprise system and vote to subsidize corporate inefficiency and failure; to rail against welfare cheats and wink at white collar crime; to stand for equal educational opportunity but oppose open housing legislation; to promote economic competition but reject strong antitrust measures.

Republicans have traditionally resisted inevitable social change, rather than working to modify a program to make it consistent with their own goals and principles. Health care offers a good illustration. Few, if any, Republicans advocate that we embrace socialized medicine. But few Americans can afford the expense of extended illness or hospitalization. The question for the Republican Party is not whether we can afford a health system that provides a minimum level of care and treatment for our people, but whether we can formulate a policy and program that best conforms to our traditional principles of individual initiative and responsibility. In my view, a tax credit to those who purchase their own health insurance would be fully consistent with those principles.

A second contributing factor to our party's minority status is an intolerance of ideological diversity. At the very heart of the free enterprise system lies the belief that open competition insures the availability of the best products and services. This axiom applies to philosophy as well as to products. The spark of creativity leaps from the clash and confrontation of ideas. Moreover, the insistence upon intellectual rigidity in the face of shifting social complexities ignores a fundamental natural law that in moving streams there is life and regeneration, and in closed ponds, stagnation and sterility.

The major challenge facing the Republican Party is the restoration of credibility and trust. Both parties, after all, have as goals the preservation of human dignity and privacy, of allowing each person to seek his or her full potential in a society that is open, honest and fair. The question that must be answered in November is which party offers the best vehicle for achieving these goals.

If the Republican Party is to continue as a viable political institution, it must offer as leaders those individuals to whom the American people will respond. "We trust you." Our degree of success in opening our doors to new ideas and to attracting competent and trustworthy candidates will determine whether the Grand Old Party will become truly Grand or simply Old.

William S. Cohen is a Republican Congressman representing Maine's 2d District.

Marxist Road to Rome

By C. L. Sulzberger

ATLANTA—The Italian people, whose wide variety of genius has never included a talent for self-government since old Roman days, have now devised an extraordinary, ramshackle system to help their nation out of its terrible crisis. This is no less than the formation of a government which excludes the Communist Party from all its ministries but which depends wholly upon at least tacit Communist support to get anything at all done.

Only with the backing of those they openly distrust can the Christian Democrats succeed in climbing out of an abyss of inflation, unemployment, corruption, maladministration and social unrest. Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti is thus in the peculiar position of holding the Communists away while implementing an emergency plan of such a nature that he can count on those same Communists to support it.

The Communists have not only escaped from the political ghetto in which the Christian Democrats had for so long sought to pen them but they have already obtained enormous provincial and municipal power as well as national prestige and parliamentary influence.

One of their members is president of the lower house; seven committees in the Senate and Chamber of Deputies have Communist chairmen. But, excluded from a cabinet relying on their support, they will get credit for its successes while escaping blame for its failures.

Over thirty years the Communists have improved their electoral position by moving steadily upward from 18.9 percent of the vote to 34.4 percent in June while the Christian Democrats slid from a high of 48.5 percent in 1948 to 38.7 percent this year.

Enrico Berlinguer, the brilliant party leader, has been saying for months: "The Communist question can no longer be avoided. . . . The Italy of today cannot be governed without the Italian Communist Party." It seems inevitable that some of Berlinguer's followers will eventually be given at least secondary posts in a coalition government based upon his vaunted formula, the "historical compromise."

Such a compromise, as he sees it, would unite all (except neo-Fascist) political factions in a "national" government, avoiding an open clash between right-wing and left-wing forces or the kind of left-alliance cabinet that would surely split Italy into two warring camps and very likely repeat the Chilean tragedy.

There is sharp division among Western leaders about the consequences of such an inclusive coalition government. Many agree with Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn, who told me during the course of a very lengthy conversation that he was convinced

Italy's Communists would ape the Soviet Union's and that this "is predictable in any and all Communist revolutions; one thing is said before gaining power and another thing is done afterward."

"Before the [Bolshevik] revolution Lenin made many, many promises. He promised freedom of movement for everyone, an absence of censorship, peasant ownership of land, direct workers' control of industry." Solzhenitsyn stresses that not a single one of these pledges was honored, and concludes:

"The West deceives itself by thinking that this dictatorship stems from Russia's own past and that therefore the West is immune to the disease

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

'Berlinguer is being logical when he insists his party wishes to continue Italy's membership in NATO.'

because its own heritage is different. I don't believe the statements of the French or Italian Communist Parties concerning their intentions. One must not forget that Lenin himself always used golden words before coming to power. But once he came to power he showed that he had a well-organized dictatorship run by an iron fist."

I have boundless admiration for Solzhenitsyn's geological courage and immense respect for his literary gifts but I think that because of his suffering and his experience only with the Soviet form of communism his views are oversimplified.

Personally, I have been impressed in long talks with Berlinguer and it seems to me he is being logical when he insists his party wishes at present to continue Italy's membership in NATO. Why is this logical, since NATO is patently a protective alliance aimed at only one principal adversary, the Communist Soviet Union?

The reason is that Berlinguer not only believes in developing a different form of socialism—with democratic guarantees—in his country but also recognizes the very real possibility of a Soviet or pro-Soviet putsch in neighboring Yugoslavia some time after Tito's death.

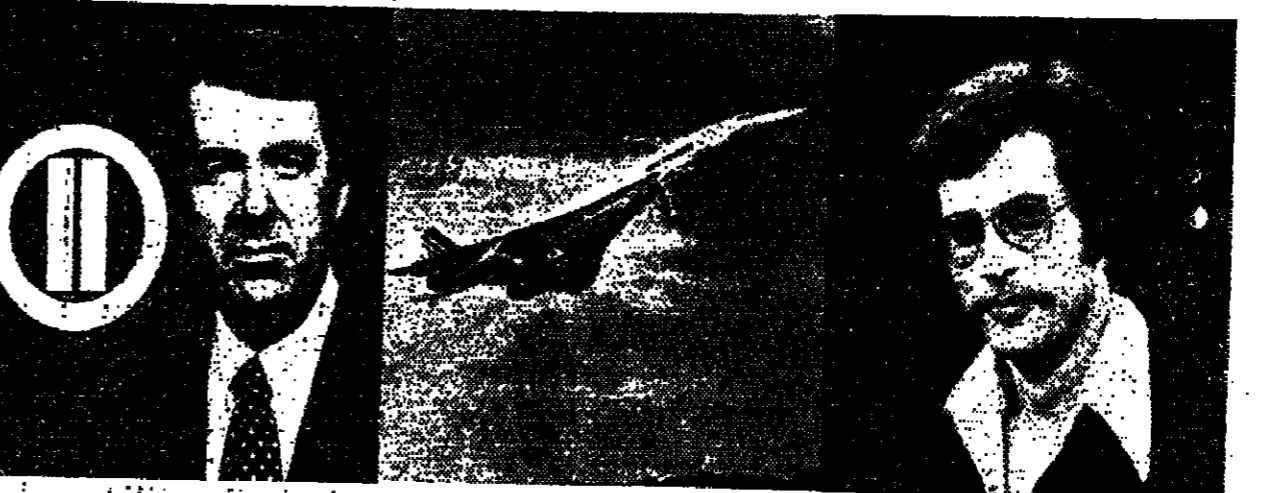

And Berlinguer, in 1976, just like Tito in 1948, doesn't fancy the idea of a Soviet or Soviet-puppet neighbor for the independent Italy whose independent future he now, in one or other way, is helping to plan.

Realities

You say "The remaining hospital staffs will be heavily overstuffed. Every single municipal hospital is currently as severely understaffed that no accreditation survey should approve explaining how."

You call the costs "inflated" without explaining how.

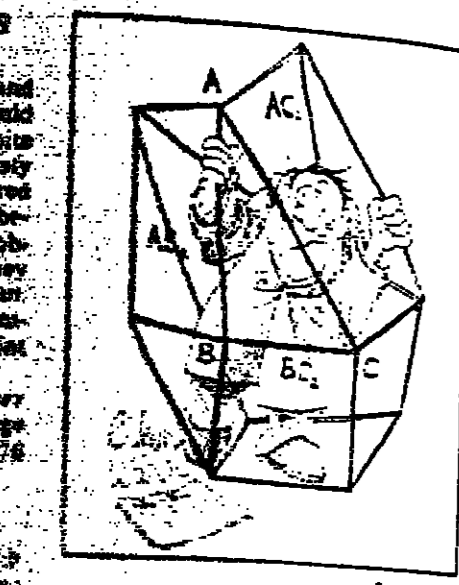

You insist that the Health and Hospitals Corporation "meet its budget requirements perhaps by as many as 4,000 more layoffs." Did you get the needs or from accountants?

The city's sovereignty does matter but the issue is not only money or jobs. It is what services are to be given or denied. It is whether we are willing to save the money the Control Board demands by losing patients who could be saved if the hospitals were staffed.

We must not obscure a callous concern for the ill and injured of this city by pompous talk of fiscal realities or without consideration of medical realities.

Our Medical Board (and I am sure others) would welcome the opportunity to show you (and the Mayor) what is happening in our hospitals and to consider testable alternatives.

Examining Issues

To the Editor—

As a member of the New York State Press Club, I am deeply interested in the quality of journalism in this state. It is my hope that the Press Club's efforts will lead to a more informed and active public.

I am particularly concerned about the role of the press in a free society. The press has a duty to report on the actions of those in power and to provide a platform for the expression of diverse views.

I believe that the Press Club should continue to work for the improvement of the news profession and to uphold the highest standards of journalistic integrity.

For the Viking Mission

To the Editor—

I am writing to express my support for the Viking mission to Mars. This is a bold and exciting step in human exploration and scientific discovery.

The Viking landers will provide us with valuable data about the planet's environment and geology. I hope that the mission will uncover evidence of past or present life on Mars.

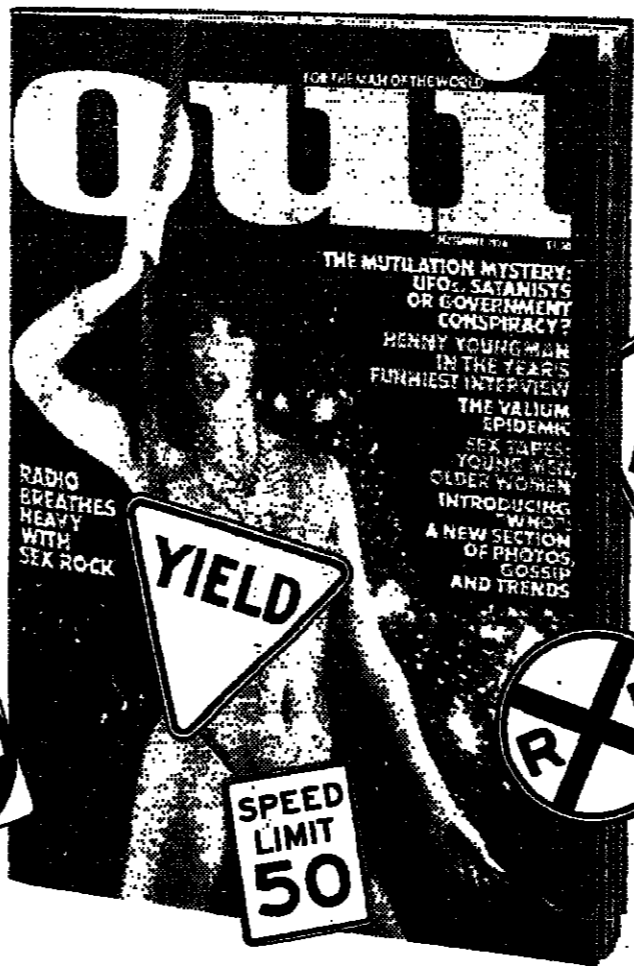

I encourage the public to follow the progress of the mission and to share in the excitement of this historic endeavor.

Peace Corps Veterans Step Ten Years Into the Past

Republican Convention

President Ford's delegate count mounted steadily as Ronald Reagan, despite the first signs of defeatism in his camp, began a last-ditch fight for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Sources close to President Ford said he seemed most likely to choose Senator Howard H. Baker, Jr. of Tennessee or William D. Ruckelshaus, who resigned as Deputy Attorney General from the Nixon Administration, as his Vice Presidential running mate.

The supporters of President Ford and Mr. Reagan joined battle for the first time on the convention floor over a change in party rules that could decide the outcome of their contest.

The Philippines disaster control center in Manila said the earthquake that struck the southern island of Mindanao left 1,744 people dead, 2,094 missing and some 28,000 homeless following the tremor and tidal waves sweeping coastal regions.

Right-wing Christians agree, seeing the conflict as not so much between rightist and leftist Lebanese as between the Lebanese and Palestinians. The major threat to the Palestinians is Syria, once their major supporter and supplier. [1:1-2]

National

W. Mark Felt, a former associate director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who retired in 1973, said he had authorized in 1972 the commission of two burglaries by agents engaged in domestic intelligence investigations.

Gangs of black youths in Detroit who have been terrorizing black and white shopkeepers and pedestrians on the city's East Side in recent weeks, have taken their violence to downtown areas with hit-and-run attacks on buses and stores.

Metropolitan

The first sale of oil leases off the Atlantic shore was delayed for eight months until Associate Justice Thurgood Marshall of the United States Supreme Court had turned down a move to block the proceeding.

New York City's director of leasing, Michael R. Palumbo, who arranges the city's payment of $87 million a year in rents, was arrested on a charge of soliciting and accepting a gratuity of $3,000 from a real estate agent.

Tribal Record Played

Mrs. Killinger's children hear the sound of Mende tribal chanting on an old record she plays for them. "They like the Mende singers even better than 'Sesame Street,'" she says.

It is probably the children who have brought about the greatest changes in the lives of the former Peace Corps workers who attended the reunion. "I love being a parent," said Mel Glenn. "But there's no more room in my life now for the gypsy spirit."

Picking the seeds out of a slice of watermelon for his 3-year-old son, Jonathan, Mel Glenn reminisced for a moment about her heat in Africa, and then talked of Sheephead Bay.

"Sometimes," he said, "I'll be going out to the dell at night for a bottle of milk and a pizza, and I'll think about hitchhiking along a deserted road to Monrovia. I didn't know it then, but that was the freest moment in my life."

Then, like a chorus in quadrophonic sound, with one voice touching off the next, children in all directions began to cry. Christopher Onken, who is 4, fell out of an apple tree and Alexandra, his older sister, got water splashed in her eyes, and Tammi Lewnau's little brother poked a fork in her cheek.

TOWN AND COUNTRY: If it weren't for the skyline of Central Park West on the left, you might have thought yesterday, on a beautiful sunny day, that you were in the country, and not in Frederick Law Olmstead's legacy to New York City, Central Park. The body of water is The Pond. The humidity continued in the low forties for another bell-clear day.

Good Samaritan or Victim? A Perplexing Question

By LESLIE MAITLAND
Did 56-year-old Abraham Rudnick die as the victim of a crime, or was he a Good Samaritan?
Was he trying to protect himself when he drew a gun on two armed robbers, or was he trying to save the lives of two companions believed to be the only witnesses, besides his murders, to his now-disputed act?

Species: Grouper; Summer Habitat: Near Long Island Salt Water

By GEORGE VECSEY
Special to The New York Times
EAST HAMPTON, L.I.—The grouper is a hardy migratory species. In the winter, it lurks in the crevices of the city, toughening up for the summer pilgrimage to Long Island.
Sometime after Memorial Day, the grouper begins its traditional trek eastward, braving the twin horrors of the Long Island Rail Road and the Long Island Expressway, until, gasping for breath, it finds a few feet of living space somewhere near salt water.

Grouper gathered on Asparagus Beach, the main attraction for the singles crowd in East Hampton, L.I.

Goodbye to Classic Coop And Hello Pizza

By MIMI SHERATON
At first glance, it looks much like any other pizza-by-the-slice joint in the city, cleaner and more orderly, perhaps, but still a narrow corner-funcheonette with the usual counters and stools, dispensers of paper napkins, and shakers full of oregano, dried red pepper flakes and, alas, garlic salt. But the Famous Ray's Pizza—not to be confused with the three or four other unfamous Rays around town—represents a bona fide Horatio Alger success story, Italian style.

At this location on the southwest corner of 11th Street and Avenue of the Americas for a mere three years, the owner, Mario Di Rienzo (Ray is a family nickname), serves 2,000 customers daily between 11 A.M. and 9 P.M., Monday to Saturday.

Even as he unlocks the doors each morning, hungry regulars await, drawn by the hot yeast scent of baking dough and the spicy fragrances of bubbling cheese and tomatoes, garlic and oregano. By noon, the line usually extends halfway across the avenue, not always to the delight of residents of the surrounding neighborhood.

Expansion Is Completed
To accommodate those hungry fans Mr. Di Rienzo has just finished his expansion into an adjoining store. The new section, with small tables and chairs, sparkles with yellow tile walls and ceramic murals of fruit trees and fountain colonnades, all making additional seating space for children from the nearby public school and older students from the New School for Social Research, Villagers who stop for an impulsive slice on their appointed rounds, and for the customers who come from all over the city and, in fact, the country.

"But I do not want to open another shop in New York," Mr. Di Rienzo said. "Why should I when people come here?"
Born in Abruzzi, the region of Italy reputed to produce that country's best cooks, Mr. Di Rienzo went as a teenager to Rome, where his first job was washing dishes in the Swedish Embassy. Once inside a kitchen, the way was clear. During the next 10 years he worked his way up to chef's helper in the British and Danish Embassies in Rome, and finally went to London, eventually to become chef de cuisine to the Italian Ambassador.

Picks New York
But when he decided to go into business for himself, he felt the only place for him was New York and the city has not been a disappointment. After working for three years as personal chef to Arthur A. Houghton Jr., the Corning Glass chairman, Mr. Di Rienzo said his farewell to classic cookery and opted for pizza.

"I would never open a real restaurant—it's too much trouble," he said. "Here I make only one thing and I do it perfectly."
Although pizza-by-the-slice has never attained real status with the most discriminating pizza buffs, Ray's—or Mario's—version comes closest to doing so because of the ingredients used. Both the crisp round Neapolitan pie and the rectangular, thick and breadly Sicilian variation (my own preference) are made of light, crisp dough, topped with more abundant sprinklings of fresh mozzarella and a more delicately seasoned sauce than is usually found in competitive products.

As a result, an instantaneous turnover means no slices hang around growing soggy between takers. And for those who like their pizzas extra crisp, a counterwoman will slide the ordered slice back into the oven for a final blast of heat.

Mr. Di Rienzo reports that he is constantly approached by out-of-towners who want him to sell them a Famous Ray's franchise for their hometown. So far he has resisted, but since he is only 35 and ambitious, he is not averse to "some form of expansion."
"Maybe my brother Lamberto, who works here with me, will open one in some place like Los Angeles," he said. Then, with a deprecating shrug of the shoulder and an equally deprecating downturned smile, Mr. Di Rienzo added: "Once, in Miami, I went to a Pizza Hut. Well, I don't like to speak badly of any other pizzeria, but I guess that's what happens when a place is franchised."

In addition to plain whole pizzas at $4 each, onion-laden Sicilian squares at 60 cents and Neapolitan wedges for 35 cents, Famous Ray's offers the usual assortment of toppings that include peppers, onions, anchovies, and the only two not up to par: dried-out sausage slices and slightly bitter wet mushrooms.

"Ninety out of every 100 customers I see here are regulars," Mario said. "It's amazing, isn't it, what you can do with such a simple thing?"

Goodbye to Classic and Hello Pizza

By SHIRLEY SILVERMAN

At five places, a pizza mania has taken hold. The pizza-by-the-slice concept is newer, faster, and more orderly than the old-fashioned pepperoni, mushroom, and sausage pizza. It is also more convenient and economical. The pizza mania is spreading rapidly. In New York City, it is now being tried in other parts of the city. In other parts of the country, it is being tried in other parts of the country. In other parts of the country, it is being tried in other parts of the country.

Insulation Linked To Electric Service

By IRVIN MOLOTSKY

Over the objections of New York City and two upstate utilities, the State Public Service Commission has promulgated regulations requiring that new homes meet minimal standards of insulation before utilities can hook up the buildings' electrical services.

The new regulations require, among other things, that the houses have six-inch insulation in ceilings and three-and-a-half-inch insulation in walls, and that storm doors and windows be installed.

The commission said in its ruling: "The use of adequate thermal insulation is an essential means of reducing wasteful energy consumption."

A spokesman for the agency said that it was in effect upholding the findings of a former Commissioner, William K. Jones, who conducted hearings into the question a few years ago. Mr. Jones's findings were adopted by the P.S.C. in a 3-to-1 vote, with Edward P. Larkin dissenting. Mr. Larkin could not be reached for comment yesterday on his dissent.

A spokesman for the Consolidated Edison Company said that it would begin complying with the ruling as soon as they become effective, as did a representative of the Long Island Lighting Company, who added: "We support insulation standards for housing and have been recommending them since City's Objection.

The city's objection to the P.S.C. requirements, a spokesman for the Corporation Counsel's office said, was based on concern that it would erode the city's home-rule powers. He said that the city agreed that it was desirable to establish installation standards, but that the city was the appropriate entity to establish them.

The city is considering whether to appeal the rulings, as is the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company, one of the utilities that had challenged the commission's jurisdiction in the case.

"We don't object to insulation per se, but we don't think the P.S.C. is the right body to promulgate the ruling," said a spokesman for Central Hudson, which has its headquarters in Poughkeepsie. "If the ruling is upset in the courts we could be liable to damage suits from customers we forced to install insulation."

The other company that challenged the commission's jurisdiction, the New York State Electric and Gas Corporation, with headquarters in Binghamton, said it did not expect to pursue the matter further because the company's was "not a very strong objection—just one to get it on the record."

A spokesman for the company said the insulation called for by the commission was of the kind that one would expect to find in a new house anyway, so that the ruling would not have the effect of increasing housing prices generally.

The company calculated the approximate costs of insulating a typical 1,200-square-foot ranch house to P.S.C. standards and came up with the following estimates, stressing that they would vary from area to area: Roof insulation—$420. Wall insulation—$365. Storm windows—$280. Storm doors—$120.

The commission said that in any event the insulation would pay for itself through fuel savings. The new rules apply to all one-family and two-family houses for which a building permit is issued after next April 1 and for apartment houses for which a permit is issued after next July 1.

Nassau Directs Spa To Correct Its Ads

The Suffolk County Consumer Affairs Department has obtained an agreement from a concern to run advertisements correcting an error that appeared in earlier ads of the company and the department said that it was pleased by the agreement that it would pursue that course in future disputes.

The corrective ads are being run in the Long Island newspaper Newsday by Holiday Spa, which has health centers on Long Island as well as in six states and the District of Columbia. Holiday Spa had advertised in Newsday that people were eligible to obtain memberships for $2.77 a week, but failed to point out that although the payments were to be made over a two-year period, the membership was for only one year. In effect, the cost of a one-year membership was double what it appeared to be.

James J. Lack, the Suffolk Consumer Affairs Commissioner, said that the corrective ad was an effective remedy when there was a problem of reaching a large number of people who otherwise could not learn of the advertiser's agreement to remedy the situation.

In this case, he said, the remedy is to notify readers that the original ads were in error and that the company is willing to sell two-week memberships for the $2.77-a-week price to settle the complaint brought against it by the county.

The agreement cost Health Spas $750 in investigative costs paid to the Consumer Affairs Department. John Moore, the company president, estimated that it would cost at least $6,000 in advertising and administrative fees and that the cost of honoring memberships could cost upwards of $34,000, depending upon how many people responded to the ads.

The corrective ads will not run elsewhere, Mr. Moore said, because no one complained about them except on Long Island.

Sears Roebuck Cuts Tire Prices

Sears, Roebuck & Company has reduced the prices on two of its popular lines of steel-belted radial tires in an attempt to capture a larger share of the replacement-tire market.

Sears' prices for its Metric line, which ranged from $50.75 to $88, have been reduced to a range of $40.75 to $81.25. Its Sport line, formerly $42 to $58.50, has been reduced to $33.68 to $45.31. Other tire sellers, meanwhile, are increasing their prices.

A Sears spokesman identified the maker of the Metric line as Michelin, the European tire maker. "This is pretty widely known," he said.

Not so widely known is the name of the maker of the Sport line, which the spokesman would identify only as an American company.

Case of 5 Girls Charged in Beating Is Open to Public

NEWARK, Aug. 17 (AP)—In an unusual move, court proceedings against five teen-age girls charged with beating and robbing a woman in downtown Newark have been opened to the public.

"I think the public is entitled to hear what's going on," said on a busy street corner. They Judge Alexander P. Maturri of entered pleas of not guilty.

Wilson Fears Terrorist Lurch to Fascism

Terrorism not only threatens the "standards of civilized people," Sir Harold Wilson said in Washington yesterday, but can result in "a lurch toward neo-Fascism" in which "the neo is less discernible than the Fascism." Sir Harold, the British Prime Minister until his resignation in March, spoke at the convention banquet of Hadassah. The women's Zionist organization presented the Labor Party leader with its Henrietta Szold Award, which is named for the Hadassah founder and carries a $1,000 honorarium.

The threat of terrorism, like racialism, is "indivisible," Sir Harold told the 2,500 delegates. "In Britain, a West Indian or Bengali, in the United States a Puerto Rican, cannot afford to shrug his shoulders when the attack is antisemitic," he said. "It is not open to any gentile, Jew, black, white, yellow or brown to pass by on the other side, reassuring himself that it is not his quarrel."

Robert J. McCloskey, a close associate of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, has been chosen by President Ford as Ambassador to The Netherlands. Administration officials said yesterday. The formal announcement probably will be made next week. He would replace Kingston Gould Jr., Mr. McCloskey, 53 years old, currently holds the dual titles of Ambassador-at-Large and Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations. He served as envoy to Cyprus and as a press spokesman for Secretaries of State Dean Rusk, William F. Rogers and Mr. Kissinger.

There's another Ickes at the Interior Department—Dennis Ickes, whose father was a cousin of the late Harold Ickes, the stormy controversial Interior Secretary from 1932 until 1945. Effective Monday, the 32-year-old Mr. Ickes became Deputy Under Secretary of the department, with responsibility for Indian and territorial affairs and equal employment opportunity. Mr. Ickes joined the department a few months ago after serving in the Justice Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs. The Nebraska-born lawyer played a major government role in negotiations following the incident at Wounded Knee, S. D., in 1973.

appearances by State Senator Julian Bond of Georgia and Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta. Mr. Schultz replaces Melvin Van Peebles, the playwright-director. Cast sources said Mr. Van Peebles was dismissed over "artistic differences" with the producer, Hannah Weinstein, who produced the film "Claudine" and earlier was a founder of the minority-controlled Third World Cinema Corporation here.

Barbara Scott Preiskel, a lawyer and Manhattan resident, was named by Mayor Beame yesterday as a public member of the Board of Ethics. The board offers opinions on potential conflicts of interest involving municipal officials and employees. Mrs. Preiskel is vice president and legislative counsel of the Motion Picture Association of America, in charge of censorship matters.

Arthur DeMoss, a 50-year-old Pennsylvania insurance executive announced yesterday that he had provided half the $100,000 bail for Eldridge Cleaver because the former black Panther leader "had a spiritual conversion."

Mr. DeMoss said he had turned over personal cash-equivalent highway bonds for Cleaver's bail as a way of "supplementing my prayers by helping him assure a useful place in society."

Mr. Cleaver was released last Friday from Alameda County Jail in Oakland, Calif., for a trial Aug. 23 on charges relating to a 1968 shootout between the Oakland police and the Panthers in which a member of the militant black party was killed.

Mr. Cleaver has been a "radical and Marxist" but is now a "very humble person" Mr. DeMoss said. "That's not the old Eldridge Cleaver."

Smooth sailing is still eluding the Santa Maria, the newest version of Christopher Columbus's ship, which is berthed in Atlantic City at the Gardner's Basin Historic Waterfront Foundation. The one-third-scale model, here July 4 for Operation Sail, almost missed taking part because of engine trouble and an alarming leak.

On Monday, according to the Santa Maria's skipper, Fred Quillen, the ship was to be used by some New York filmmakers to shoot a sea-battle scene for a pirate film. When the actor-pirates showed up, Mr. Quillen said yesterday, "the captain walked into his cabin and in a matter of minutes his costume was off—it looked like a pirate-porno film." The foundation canceled the filming. Maria Mason, project director at Gardner's Basin, said, "It wasn't the type of film we wanted the basin to be involved in."

GOV. THOMSON ROLE UNDER U.S. INQUIRY

CONCORD, N.H., Aug. 17 (UPI)—The Federal Civil Service Commission is conducting a "limited inquiry" in connection with charges that Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr. used federally paid employes for political tasks.

Ralph Eddy, a trial lawyer for the commission, said today that commission investigators were now in the state to determine whether the allegations involved any possible violations of the Hatch Act, which bans partisan political activities by Government employes. "We did determine that it would be appropriate for us to conduct a limited inquiry to see if we could obtain details which might indicate possible violations of the Hatch Act," Mr. Eddy said.

He declined to state how many investigators were in New Hampshire or who they were interviewing. Mr. Eddy said the investigators had been in the state "three or four weeks."

"I would hope we'd be able to come to some conclusion within 10 days or so," Mr. Eddy said. "We're not doing a full-scale investigation. There's no indication that's appropriate."

Mr. Eddy said last month that his office was looking over newspaper articles about the charges against Mr. Thomson's office. He said the articles contained no "definite indications" of Hatch Act violations.

The charges were made by Peter Weeks, a Portsmouth city councilman and former member of the Governor's Energy Council.

California Vineyard Gets Gold Medals For the Way It Makes Its Red Wines

By FRANK J. PRIAL. Sebastiani Vineyards made something of a sweep in the wine judging at the Los Angeles County Fair earlier this month. The results disclosed that Sebastiani wines took eight gold medals, five of them in the important red table wine class.

The Sonoma winery also took two silver medals, two bronze and one honorable mention. Brookside Winery, a big Southern California winemaker, came in with more awards—12—but Brookside is also into such items as chocolate wine, mint-flavored wine and something called Apricot d'Gustasi.

It should be noted, too, that more than 350 awards were made. The Los Angeles Fair is nothing if not generous. Some 780 wines were entered, which means that more than 45 percent of all entries won at least honorable mention.

The red wine panel, of which this writer was a member, gave Sebastiani gold medals for its 1970 Barbera, 1974 Chianti, 1974 Gamay Beaujolais, 1973 Zinfandel, and nonvintage mountain burgundy, which is actually a jug wine. The white wine panel gave Sebastiani a gold medal for its 1974 Johannisberg Riesling and the apertif group gave the winery a gold medal for its dry vermouth.

In two important categories, Cabernet Sauvignon and Pinot Chardonnay, nine gold medals were awarded, four for the red and five for the white. The Cabernet winners were the 1973 Burgess Cellars, 1974 Monterey Peninsula Winery and 1973 Ridge Vineyards Montebello. Veedercrest Vineyards got a gold medal in this category for an experimental Cabernet Sauvignon and Gamay Blend.

The gold medal Chardonnays were the 1973 Freeman Abbey, 1974 Sterling Vineyards, 1974 Sonoma Winery, 1974 Dry Creek Vineyards and 1974 Pardiucci Wine Cellars.

One of the most attractive categories among the reds this year was the petite sirah, a grape that was used mostly for blending a few years ago. Three wineries won gold medals, Fetzer Vineyards, for the 1974 Mendocino Special Reserve, and Pardiucci for its 1972.

The biggest category was Zinfandel, in which 43 wines were entered. The panel awarded seven gold medals: Fetzer for its 1974 Pickett (a bottling from one separate vineyard), Simi Winery for its 1973, the already mentioned 1973 Sebastiani, Cresta Bianca for a nonvintage Zinfandel, all from Mendocino county grapes, to the Sutter Home Winery for their 1973 and two wineries for so-called late harvest, high alcohol wines: Monterey Peninsula Winery 1974 and Grand Cru Vineyards 1974. Fe Opera Is Still Blossoming at 20 eric troupes in this country, Santa Fe operates under ideal festival conditions. The singers arrive several weeks beforehand to rehearse, and they remain throughout the summer, insuring stable casts and polished performances.

"The fact that we are a festival operation I think accounts for much of our success with the public," Mr. Crosby reflected in an interview. "We can afford to take chances with offbeat items because opera buffs want to see new things now and we plan our repertory accordingly. This summer, for instance, we've been doing Virgil Thomson's 'The Mother of Us All' and a rarely heard Cavalli opera written in 1643, 'L'Esprit' followed by more familiar works like 'Salome,' 'Figaro,' and 'Traviata.'"

Numerous Premieres

Actually, this is the kind of fare Santa Fe has always presented, and a glance at the list of operas staged here over the last two decades is rather extraordinary: four world premieres, 15 American premieres and numerous other works that opera goers rarely encounter during the winter seasons in the country's major operatic centers.

"Museum opera that constantly relies on the standard classics just doesn't make sense for a small town like Santa Fe," says Mr. Crosby. "For one thing, the people who live in this area rarely see opera, and they do not arrive with preconceived ideas—we can get away with being adventurous as long as the productions are first-class."

"Furthermore, the kind of company we are dictates the choice of operas. Take the very first season, for instance, all our singers were young, attractive and good actors, so we naturally tended toward ensemble pieces like 'Così fan tutte' and 'The Rake's Progress,' works that would be directly concerned with our resources. In this respect we have not changed greatly—it's the overall company standard that counts, not glittery stars. I think the public appreciates an effort for total theatrical and musical quality more than ever today."

Another aspect of the Santa Fe operation that has been traditional since the very first season is its apprentice system. Every year a group of hand-picked apprentices spend their summers with the company, singing in the chorus or small roles. Many of them, such as Sherrill Milnes and Judith Blegen, go on to major careers. All of them receive valuable experience in their craft.

Santa Fe's apprentice program is so highly regarded by other American companies that impresarios in other parts of the country will often call upon Mr. Crosby or his assistant and artistic administrator, Richard Gaddes, for suggestions on promising new talent.

Mr. Gaddes, in fact, has become something of an impresario on his own in St. Louis where he heads a new opera troupe that had a brief but highly successful debut season last spring. Although there is no official connection between the two companies, many Santa Fe singers appeared in St. Louis and the artistic philosophy of providing opera goers with a summertime oasis for many years to come.

Mr. Crosby is branching out, too. This fall he officially takes over the reins of the Manhattan School of Music as its new president, and it will be interesting to see if the Santa Fe touch will be extended to the school's opera department. "I will have a 25-page release to the press on that subject by the end of the year," Mr. Crosby promises.

Meanwhile, opera at Santa Fe continues until Aug. 23, performing for 95 percent capacity houses. The mountain air may be a bit brisk at times, and a sudden rain shower might possibly dampen patrons sitting in the 10 rows unprotected by the sweeping curve of a theater whose practical efficiency is matched by its architectural grace of line and excellent acoustics. The "miracle in the desert" gives every indication of providing opera goers with a summertime oasis for many years to come.

Festival at Max's Puts Bands in the Spotlight lished reggae groups rather than original material, and Monyaka, which performed at Max's on Monday night, is no exception. But the group has a strong vocalist and lead guitarist in Errol Moore, and the drummer, Richard Bertram, is as authoritative as one could wish.

There is something slightly jarring about watching Max's usual white, middle-class patrons dancing blithely while Mr. Moore sings of black pride, starvation and Rastafarianism. But he announces that Monyaka is playing "for your dancing pleasure," and everyone seems quite comfortable. Different bands will be playing tonight and tomorrow; a call to Max's will provide details.

Paris Opera Tackles Logistics, Too

By FLORA LEWIS

PARIS, Aug. 15—Forty giant truck-sized containers, holding 2,000 cubic meters of scenery, hundreds of costumes, wigs, and masses of other paraphernalia, are going to New York by sea for the Paris Opera's grandiose first visit to America.

mediate rehearsals for the New York opening on Sept. 8, an incredibly tight schedule. The casts that the Paris Opera is taking to New York are international in character, as they are with any major company today. There is, naturally, a predominance of French singers, but many of these are to be found in the smaller roles. Among the leading artists, only a few have not been heard at the Met, while some members of the New York company will take roles they have not sung at the Met before.

I think there are two things we have to convince the general public: One, in purely economic terms the value of the city's cultural life—jobs, taxes generated and businesses that stay here—are all fundamental to the city. Two, without the enrichment that art and artists bring to society, you have a sterile and decadent existence."

Charges Flying in State Dispute On an Education Aide's Benefits

By STEVEN R. WEISMAN The chairman of the New York State Pension Commission lobbied a potentially explosive charge yesterday at the president of the New York City Board of Education, only to see it apparently diffused before it could even fit the target. What turned out to be one of the more curious exchanges of the year had the added distinction of involving two men who are personal friends, and both of them acknowledged that they had discussed the matter as recently as last weekend. At issue was an accusation by Otto Kinzel, the outspoken chairman of the Permanent Commission on Public Employment Pension and Retirement Systems, that the board had made $23,000 in illegal payments to the Prudential Insurance Company for lavish retirement benefits for Bernard R. Gifford, the deputy school chancellor. Later, Dr. Robert Christen, the president of the board, said no such payment had been made. He said he had ordered it stopped a few weeks ago, when the first legal questions about it had been raised. 'Never Mentioned' 'That's news to me,' Mr. Kinzel said, when he was told last night of Dr. Christen's reaction. 'I saw him over the weekend and I even brought it up. He never mentioned it to me.' 'Otto could have asked me,' said Dr. Christen, who added that at a cocktail party upstairs at the City Comptroller, that called on Mr. Goldin to investigate the payments, which he said had been authorized last June 17—after the board had been 'advised

Fannie Mae: Just What Is It?

By VARTAN G. VARTAN

The moderation in interest rates has worked lately to the benefit of such interest-sensitive stocks as those of consumer loan companies, utilities and insurance concerns.

Ever so slightly, this moderating influence has been detected, too, in the price action of the shares of the Federal National Mortgage Association, a New York Stock Exchange issue with some unusual characteristics.

Fannie Mae, as the company is known, has not exactly been kicking up its heels in the stock market. But it edged ahead 3/8 last week to close at 15 1/2.

Yesterday, the stock closed at 15 3/4, its best price of the session, and showed a gain of 1/4 for the day.

Early in June, when Fannie Mae was selling at 13 1/2, Lucien O. Hooper of Thomson & McKinnon & Hutchinson Kohlhaver Inc. noted that the stock "psychologically has been a higher-interest-rate casualty."

He went on to say that "it often pays real investors to take a more serious look at the unpopular stocks than the popular ones."

There is a certain air of mystery, even in the minds of some market professionals, about Fannie Mae. "I've never totally understood that company," one stock analyst confessed. "Therefore, I don't follow it."

So the question arises: Just what is Fannie Mae? Moody's Investors Service describes it as "a unique situation combining a publicly controlled company and the influence of Governmental agencies."

It had its start in 1938 as a Federal Government unit to establish a market for first mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration. In 1970, Fannie Mae was converted to full private ownership, and that same year, after a stint on the over-the-counter market, the stock was listed on the Big Board.

Today, Fannie Mae remains subject to certain Federal regulations. One unusual feature is that one-third of its 15-member board is appointed by the President of the United States.

The business of Fannie Mae now is to employ its funds—mostly borrowed money—to buy residential mortgages insured by the F.H.A. or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. It also purchases conventional home mortgages.

Essentially, it makes money on the difference between interest received on mortgage portfolio and interest paid on the outstanding debt.

The single most important factor influencing Fannie Mae's financing costs," notes Morris Mark of Goldman, Sachs & Company, "is not the level of short-term interest rates but rather the cost of new intermediate-term debentures."

Earnings recently have been moving upward. The company earned $2.42 a share last year, before allowing for the conversion of debentures. On a fully diluted basis, it netted $2.

For this year, A. James Donahue of White, Weld & Company estimates earnings at $2.60 a share before the conversion allowance and at $2.15 fully diluted.

Standard & Poor's anticipates "another moderate earnings increase" for 1976. Nobody expects the kind of dynamic performance that took place in the stock between mid-1970 and early 1972 when, fueled by a sharp earnings gain and a dramatically improved interest-rate situation, along with other factors, Fannie Mae shares rose by nearly 300 percent.

Shortly thereafter, the stock was split and, within two years, profits turned downward and share prices tumbled.

Today, it is a much more sedate Fannie Mae when it comes to stock price performance.

Mr. Donahue, for example, regards Fannie Mae as "a modified interest-rate play" in a stock that holds some appeal simply on a yield basis.

At present prices, Fannie Mae provides a return of close to 6 percent to its common shareholders.

Earlier this year, the quarterly dividend was raised to 22 cents from the former rate of 20 cents. The dividend payout has been rising since 1970.

One Wall Street analyst describes the stock as "a trader's paradise" because it customarily shows heavy volume and a high degree of liquidity, meaning that a large number of shares can change hands with little or no price change.

"It's a place," the analyst says, "where a guy can park some borrowed money—to buy residential mortgages insured by the F.H.A. or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration."

Analysis: Solving Unemployment Issue

Papers on Economic Activity. Examining the record of the major counter-cyclical public employment programs since 1970, Mr. Wiseman concluded that public job programs can, for the same amount of money, provide more jobs, more quickly and with less inflationary impact than alternative fiscal policies, such as a tax cut.

simply "leaf-raking" make work, and added that they are similar in content and quality to the work performed by regular public employees. He said there was insufficient evidence to judge to what extent regular state and local employees are displaced by workers paid by Federal grants.

advocates more job training. He argues that this could both provide more meaningful futures for the disadvantaged and increase the supply of trained workers, which would reduce the inflationary pressures that would arise when the economy reached full capacity again.

Starts Down 9.2%

family homes rose to 9.03 percent from 9.01 percent in June; Garth Marston, acting chairman of the bank board, commented that the rise in conventional mortgage rates was a result of a temporary but sharp slowdown in net savings inflows into savings institutions in June.

On the other hand, the record seems to substantiate the concern that public service employment does not reach the most disadvantaged job-seekers, or those who were formerly receiving unemployment insurance, implying that the programs do not result in the substantial Government savings on unemployment insurance benefits as their advocates claim.

In the midst of the current uncertainty as to the best solutions to the unemployment question, there are some optimistic indications that the problem may diminish somewhat after 1980. Andrew Brimmer of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration and a former member of the Federal Reserve Board, testified before the Joint Economic Committee last spring that the rate of growth of teenagers and of women in the labor force would slow appreciably between now and 1985.

Fewer Plan to Buy a Home. A survey conducted by the nation's second largest commercial bank shows a sharp decline in the number of Americans planning to buy a new home.

Although some of these shortcomings could be corrected, the need for structural policies remains, the Democrats argue, and a number of ideas are floating around the Carter camp. One is a Federal wage subsidy to encourage more hiring by private industry. In one version, vouchers would be given to eligible persons, to be transferred to the employer, who, in turn, would cash them in with the Government, which would thus be paying part of the salary.

Mr. Wachter, for example, believes that the noninflationary unemployment rate will drop back down to around 4 percent by 1985. The question, in the Democratic view, is "what do we do until then? Or, as the Republicans maintain: "Should we just sit tight and wait?"

The results, issued yesterday by Citicorp, the parent organization for Citibank, showed that only 3.5 percent of those questioned said they were going to buy a house in the next year or two. In March 6.8 percent of those questioned said they planned a home purchase in the near future.

Another proposal is for an employment tax credit, similar to the investment tax credit, allowing employers to take a tax credit for all workers hired above a base employment level that is adjusted as the economy fluctuates.

SOYBEANS AND OIL DECLINE TO LIMITS

Wheat and Oats Deliveries Set New Crop Lows

CHICAGO, Aug. 17 (AP)—Soybeans, soybean meal and oil and oats futures fell the allowable limits for one session today, and all wheat and two oats deliveries set new crop lows. In soybeans the fall amounted to 20 cents a bushel. Soy meal was down $10 a ton, soy oil 100 points or 1 cent a pound, and oats 6 cents a bushel. Wheat lost 9 cents and corn 5, while ice-broilers fell nearly 1 cent a pound. Live cattle futures closed with a gain of 62 cents per 100 pounds, while hogs were mixed, with nearby options gaining 37 cents per 100 pounds and deferreds falling 20 cents. Pork-belly futures declined just over 100 points, while shell eggs were 45 points lower to 80 points higher at the final bell. Weakness in grains and in the soybean complex was strongly apparent on the opening. There was some selling from the previous session, but support of mainly commercial interests failed to stand up against a large array of liquidations. A few options managed to edge just above previous closes, but promptly fell under new selling pressure. After a few minutes, the downward price trends expanded and thereafter, buyers were very scarce. Soybeans hit the bottom after midsession, followed by oil, meal and oats. A weak bid of bearish news faced the trade. More rain was forecast for the Southeast and upper Plains; export inspections of major grains were lower last week than the previous week, and there appeared to be fewer bids for grains from abroad. On the bullish side, the trade watched with some concern the effects of drought in western Europe.

G. & W. TO SELL ITS CANNON STOCK

Textile Concern to Purchase 362,800 of Its Shares

By HERBERT KOSHEZT. The Cannon Mills Company said yesterday in Kannapolis, N.C., that it had agreed to buy from Gulf and Western Industries 362,800 shares of Cannon Mills common stock at $22 a share for about $8 million.

Merger News Cannon said its directors had approved the agreement for recommendation to shareholders at a special meeting to be held as soon as practicable.

The stockholder approval is needed to authorize purchase at a figure in excess of the market price, which is 17 1/2 bid on the over-the-counter market.

Gulf and Western's purchases of Cannon Mills shares were made prior to June at the then market price of $15 to $16 a share, indicating a profit to Gulf and Western of about $3 million.

Cannon said it would pay for the stock, representing about 4 percent of the total shares outstanding entirely out of its retained earnings. Until shareholder approval is obtained, the share purchase price will be held in escrow.

In a letter to the Cannon board on June 4, Charles G. Blumhord, chairman of Gulf and Western, a diversified company, said it wanted to buy 1.5 million shares or 20 percent of Cannon on the basis of $33 principal amount of a 7 percent debenture for each Cannon share.

Thiokol Extends Offer To Buy Ventron Stock The Thiokol Corporation announced that it had extended its offer to purchase all shares of the Ventron Corporation at $44 a share until 5 P.M. New York time Aug. 30.

The offer for Ventron stock, which expired Aug. 16, brought a total of 488,825 shares representing about 89 percent of the total shares outstanding, a total that more than satisfied the requirements of at least 299,500 shares to be tendered.

Auction of Oil Leases Is Held After Delay

who include environmental groups and the State of New York, feel that oil spills would pollute the area's beaches and resorts.

New York State, several cities and counties and some environmental groups had asserted that the Secretary of the Interior had violated Federal law by failing to correctly assess the environmental impact of the lease sale. Last Friday Judge Jack B. Weinstein issued a temporary injunction against the sale in Federal District Court in Brooklyn.

On Monday the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit overturned Judge Weinstein's injunction and Justice Marshall decided not to sustain the injunction at the Supreme Court level. Justice Marshall said that the Second Circuit's decision was correct.

The Court of Appeals will hear the case on the environmental threat on its merits on Sept. 27. Until the court gives its judgment on the matter, the oil companies can not go ahead with drilling plans.

If the court finds that exploration of the so-called Baltimore Canyon is environmentally sound, it is estimated that the first wells will be drilled within three to six months.

Until now no oil well, not even exploratory, has been drilled in the Atlantic, although earlier this year a drilling ship brought up samples of rocks from the area that were described as "promising."

Any opponents of drilling were present in the Stater Hilton last night. Oil lease sales are among the most dramatic public events in any industry and last night was no exception.

Ears in the grand ball room of the hotel were attuned to Mr. Basile's voice as one by one he opened the secret bids and announced the bidder and the amount bid for each tract. Some tracts had as many as nine bidders, while 53 tracts drew no bids at all.

The sum of the high bids last night was $1,135,812,178.92, about half of the record sum of high bids of $2,092,510,354 achieved March 28, 1974, at a sale for offshore Louisiana leases. Last night's total of high bids entered—$3,512,907,401.66—compared with the record total of $6,474,003,574 at the same Louisiana sale.

A high bid does not necessarily mean that the bidder will obtain the right to drill the tract. Any bid can be rejected by the Government as inadequate.

Last night's highest single bid of $107,788,600 was made by a consortium headed by the Mobil Corporation, the Sun Company and Getty Oil Company for Tract 29. The tract was one of the 15 tracts designated by the Interior Department as Exxon bid.

These 15 tracts will pay 13 1/3 percent royalty to the Federal Government on all the oil discovered, while the 139 other tracts will pay only 16 2/3 percent royalty, the traditional royalty rate.

The Government has been experimenting with different methods of offering the leases. A high-royalty tract theoretically reduces the size of the bids to allow for the greater variety of revenue to the Government if the tract is developed. With reduced initial costs, the tracts are intended to be more attractive to the small operators.

The record bid for a single tract was $211,907,000 on Dec. 12, 1973, in an area off Mississippi and Florida.

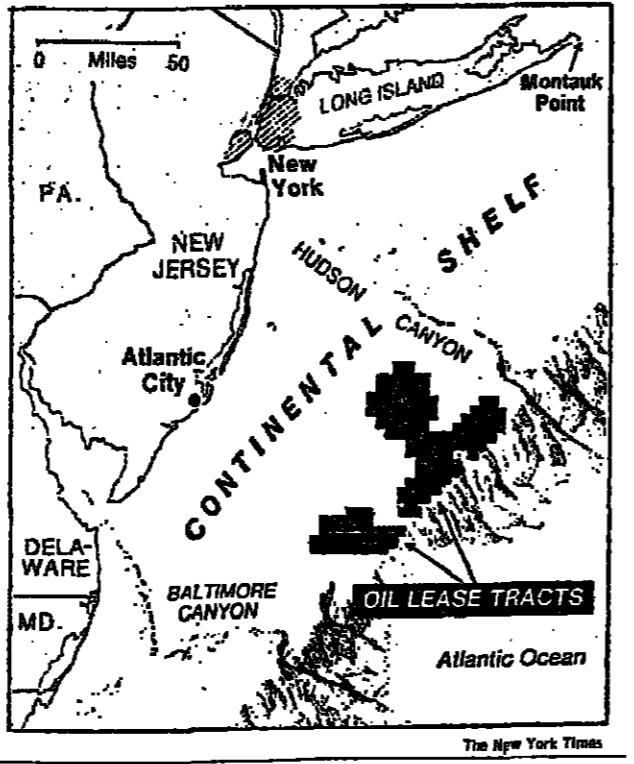

While the Mobil consortium was the single high bidder, the Exxon Corporation was by far the most active company at last night's sale. Exxon, the world's largest oil company, bid on 69 of the 101 tracts and was the high bidder on 34.

Some of the high bids on tracts submitted bids totaling $728.9 million, and its high bids on tracts totaled $349 million. The average tract covers about 9 square miles.

John L. Lofus, senior vice president of Exxon USA, the company's chief domestic oil sales manager, said, "We are very pleased with the outcome."

A considerable portion of the leases Exxon was the highest bidder on were in the more distant, deep-water portion of the area offered for lease. This surprised some analysts at the time and led to conjecture that Exxon knew something no one else knew. The conjecture was further fueled because Exxon is considered to have done the most geological studies on the area.

Exxon bid far higher for many tracts than necessary to obtain the highest bid. For instance, Exxon bid $51,208,000 for Tract 12, while a Mobil bid discovered.

consortium was next highest bidder (among nine) with $25,639,000.

J.R. Jackson, manager of environmental affairs for Exxon's exploration department, commented, "We are not happy about leaving all that money on the table but we would rather do that than miss a tract that we want."

On some tracts the bids varied widely, while on others very little separated the winner from the rest. Mobil's high bid of about $107.78 million for Tract 29, for instance, edged out a bid by a Shell consortium of $106.89 million.

The steps leading to OCS lease sale No. 40, as yesterday's sale was described, began in March 1975 with a call for nominations of tracts by the petroleum industry. The industry had conducted one seismic work in the area and generally knew what areas it was interested in.

Bids were based on geological and seismic studies and analysis, with varied interpretations leading to the differences in money offered.

Now that the sale has been held, the Interior Department must decide whether to award the tracts to the highest bidders.

Announcement of the acceptability of the bids will be made in the early fall. If bid is accepted, the remaining 80 percent of the amount must be paid—a check for 20 percent of the total was included with each bid.

If oil is found, the field will take three years to develop, and it will be at least seven years before maximum production is attained.

The United States has pioneered offshore drilling. More than 20,000 offshore wells have been drilled in American waters. Through 1975 some 7 billion barrels of oil and 26.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas will come from Tract 12, while a Mobil bid discovered.

Procter & Gamble Curbs Costs and Expands Earnings

The Procter & Gamble Company, the nation's largest maker of soaps and detergents, reported yesterday profit increases of 33 percent for the fiscal fourth quarter, ended June 30, and 20 percent for the full fiscal year.

Profit margins for domestic consumer products returned to higher levels, the company said, after several years of contraction under Government controls and double-digit inflation.

Vigorous cost-control programs and a decline in the cost of some agricultural materials (used in making soap and food products) moderated the rate of increase in selling prices.

Procter & Gamble's net income in the fiscal fourth quarter was $86.2 million, or $1.04 a share, up from the year-earlier $68 million, or 79 cents a share. Worldwide sales of $1.65 billion were up 9 percent from $1.51 billion.

Earnings in the fiscal year ended June 30 rose to $401.1 million, or $4.86 a share, from the prior year's $333.9 million, or $4.05 a share. Worldwide sales totaled $15.1 billion, an 8 percent increase from $14 billion.

Earnings from international operations were $77 million, up from $74.4 million in the previous year.

New Football Publications Due

By LEONARD SLOANE This is the time of year when football publications spring up left and right to appeal to the American male's interest and involvement in the sport. Among the types that have appeared, and disappeared, are newspaper supplements, tout sheets and magazines.

Two recently announced football periodicals, however, hope to become a permanent part of sports journalism. They are backed by major corporations—the late Howard Hughes's Summa Corporation in one instance, and jointly by American Airlines and the RCA Corporation in the other instance—and therefore have the potential for greater staying power than many previous attempts.

The Summa entry is Tom Harmon's Football Today, with the former University of Michigan All-American player serving as editor and publisher.

Mr. Harmon, who is also sports director of the Hughes Television Network and of the Hughes Hotels, said that the tabloid newspaper would appear 26 times a year—weekly during the football season and monthly at other times.

"Our editorial approach will be to concentrate on what's good for the game," said Mr. Harmon, a former Heisman Trophy winner. "The game is the most important item—not the individuals and not the teams."

Mr. Harmon recalled that he presented the idea of the publication to Summa a year ago. It was approved by Mr. Hughes—whom the former football player had met briefly about 35 years ago before his death last April, he added, and work on the project began soon thereafter.

The general black-and-white page rate will be $604, with an initial anticipated circulation of about 85,000.

Although the first issue was dated Aug. 22, regular seasonal weekly publication will begin on Sept. 5.

The other publication is a weekly newsletter called Armchair Quarterback, which will be distributed free on American's flights on which films of National Football League games are shown. Many regular passengers of the airline will also be mailed copies of the publication, in which RCA will get a number of corporate and product credits.

The four-page newsletter, scheduled to appear during the coming season, will include the starting lineups and numbers of the players so that they can be identified on the films. In addition, there will be diagrammed plays and features on different aspects of the sport.

Armchair Quarterback will be edited by Ted Smits, a general sports editor of The Associated Press. Mr. Smits will also write a "three-dot" column about the game that will be printed in each issue, beginning with the first one to follow the games of Sept. 12.

"I think that professional football has taken such a strong hold on the American imagination," said Mr. Smits, summarizing the major reason for these printed additions to the football world. This strong hold provides the impetus for both of the new publications—and the basis of their efforts to become accepted by the hard-core American football spectator.

Monsanto's Eye-Catcher

When apparel buyers from retail stores come to New York on their periodic buying trips, clothing manufacturers, fabric mills and fiber producers all try to attract their attention for obvious reasons. The Monsanto Textiles Company, which produces textile fibers, recently started to do so in a different way.

Monsanto's resource lists of manufacturers that have the Wear-Dated warranty label on their clothes are now being produced with color photographs of the merchandise. In the past, these lists—4,000 brochures divided into 11 categories of merchandise—were simply printed and without illustrations.

Billie Pollack, the company's manager of women's wear advertising and promotion, said that the new "reports" were being printed on Xerox 6500 copiers. "Manufacturers say that buyers come in asking for particular items that are pictured," she asserted.

That's just what Monsanto had in mind.

In the Spotlight

If the first girl on the left in the chorus of the show "Chorus Line" is more familiar to theater-goers than most of the others in the cast, there's a good reason. She's Laura Berger and not only does she play the role of Maggie in the hit musical but she's also the home furnishings spokeswoman for Sears, Roebuck & Company on its TV commercials.

Prior to joining the cast of the Broadway show, Miss Berger appeared in about 150 of the Sears 30-second spots over the last two years—and she is still doing more. The commercials, prepared by Ogilvy & Mather, show her talking about furniture and furnishings sold by Sears.

"I love them both," said Miss Berger yesterday about her two roles. "One is making people happy and the other is informing people. It helps me keep everything in perspective."

Madison Avenue Show

Today's the day that Madison Avenue magazine starts taping the first of a series of programs for its own television show, "Madison Avenue TV."

The show—which will be produced by Metromedia's station WNEW and packaged by the magazine—will be shown in New York on Channel 5. It will be the first of six one-hour specials, with each examining the advertising problems of different industries.

The first show, sponsored by U.S. News & World Report, will be aired on Sept. 1. Its topic will be airline advertising and its effectiveness, with agency and airline executives discussing their individual marketing programs.

Air time will be at 11:30 P.M., immediately after "Mary Hartman Mary Hartman." A tough act to follow, to follow.

managerial and policy deficiencies" found by a number of the previous reports. Mr. Clapp said in his study, dated Aug. 11, that his "further explorations and discussions with the staff led me to reach similar conclusions respecting the present program's inadequacies."

Mr. Clapp said that "one unfortunate effect of the lack of sufficient differentiation between the important and unimportant cases and the failure to establish meaningful priorities is the emphasis on the 'numbers game,' the quota system which many personnel firmly believe forms the basis for promotion."

The commissioner said this widespread perception "tends to lead to a search for minor, straightforward violations which can be handled routinely yet 'count' when evaluations are made."

Mr. Clapp said another common I.C.C. staff complaint "is that critics does pay in areas of the commission's jurisdiction since fines and penalties imposed against violators of our regulations do not cover the gain received from the illegal operation."

"Organizations, regard the fines as a cost of doing business, it is said, and once net profit is involved are not deterred from repeating the practices for which they have been penalized," he continued.

Noting that no carrier certificates have been revoked since the passage of the Motor Carriage Act in 1935, Mr. Clapp quoted critics who he said "assert that suspensions invoked do not always fit the seriousness of the flouting of commission rules."

Mr. Clapp was on vacation and could not be reached for comment on the commission action in rejecting his reorganization plan and failing to publish his report.

You know how Trendex works: it's an independent study of 71,000 households, done on a national probability basis. A cross-section of every market you sell. It tells you who buys what when.

And now — for the first time — you can compare first-marriage households vs. total households.

Who comes up the champ? The bride-to-be. In every one of these twenty-two product categories.

Look at the facts for television sets: October through December 1975, the rate of first-time marriage households* who bought television sets was twice the purchase rate of total households.

In the same three months, the acquisition rate of air conditioners by brides was 5 times that of total households. For refrigerators, it was almost 4 times, for sewing machines, over 5.

*Brides who married for the first time in 1975

Trendex tells the whole story. The same story for product after product. It's the bride-to-be who does the big buying — who's the most efficient customer you can reach anywhere.

And it makes perfect marketing sense. The girl getting married for the first time has nothing. Needs everything. That's why brides spend more in a shorter period of time than any other group measured by Trendex.

Trendex proves it. You can't find a better customer anywhere. And you reach her in Modern Bride. The one magazine read by eight out of every ten girls passing through the bridal market.
